FRIENDS OF TARIFF MEASURE BOOSTING BILL AS HOOVER'S

President's Silence Considered Answer To Farm Bloc.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—In the face of continued silence from the White House administration leaders in the senate are publicly linking the name of the president with their $600,000 tariff revenue bill.

Answering the farm bloc charge that Mr. Hoover would not stand for such a general tariff revision, his congressional leaders are going as far as they can to spread the impression that it generally can be considered "a Hoover bill" in congress.

Chairman Reed Smoot of the finance committee has informed the senate his committee strictly followed the president's wishes in framing the pending measure. He has publicly denied he ever talked with the president on the subject of tariff, although he called at the White House twice and spent a week-end at the week-end white house while his committee was framing the bill.

Smoot's statement that the bill as it stands meets the approval of the executive who must sign it before it can become a law has been echoed nationally by Republican Floor Leader Watson in a radio broadcast, but Watson also declined to pin the bill directly upon the president.

Both Smoot and Watson founded their statements, they say, upon their belief the bill meets the tariff requirement laid down in the president's last public utterance on the subject, his message at the opening of the special farm relief session of congress. At that time Mr. Hoover said tariff revision must be confined to those industries which have suffered bonafide depressions due to influx of foreign goods.

Mr. Hoover asked "a limited revision." Smoot and Watson claim their bill is limited.

The point is exceedingly important because the Republican farm bloc led by Senator Borah of Idaho insist "the sky seems to be the only limit of either the house or senate bill." They say they also are fighting for the president in seeking to limit the revision to farm products. They want to wipe out all of the industrial increases.

While the dispute goes on in and out of senate doors, the senate was approaching a vote this week on a most important phase of the bill, the proposal to continue the flexible tariff provision and the United States tariff commission. Republicans are urging continuance of the presidential power, operating through the commission, to increase or lower any tariff duty by 50 per cent. The Democrats and farm bloc members are working for curtailment of the commission's power so it would be made merely a fact finding agency for congress.

They would abolish the president's power entirely, so congress would retain all tariff making obligations. Two other matters are on the calendar for the week, the Shearer naval lobby inquiry which will open Friday with Charles M. Schwab and other shipbuilding officials on the stand before the senate naval affairs subcommittee and the investigation of nominees to President Hoover's farm board which will also begin Friday with Chairman Legge of the board on the stand.

PICKS COP'S WIFE TO FLIRT WITH

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 16.—Nursing a slightly injured jaw and convinced of the indiscretion of flirting with a policeman's wife, Lowell McClee, Newport, Ky., came before Judge Theodore S. Bertelsman of Newport police court today to answer a charge of disorderly conduct.

Out for a stroll yesterday, McClee's eyes wandered appreciatively to a pretty girl. McClee spoke pleasantly. The girl continued on her way, and McClee spoke again.

A smooth fist, incredibly hard, reached out, hit McClee's chin, and McClee awoke to find the girl, a policeman and a former prize fighter standing over him.

The girl was Mrs. Lucille Collins; the patrolman was her husband, Kenneth Collins, and the former boxer, Buddy Okrent, associated with Collins in the Dock Taxicab Company.

OPERATORS OF LOST VESSEL BLAMED FOR DISASTER ON LAKE

Coroner To Conduct Official Inquiry This Week

HOLLAND, Mich., Sept. 16.—Charging laxity on the part of the operators of the gravel carrier Andaste which sank in Lake Michigan a week ago with the loss of twenty-five lives, Coroner Gilbert Van Der Water of Ottawa County announced today that official inquiry into the disaster would be begun later this week.

Van Der Water charged the Construction Materials Company of Chicago, lessors of the 40-year-old freighter was lax in not reporting the Andaste's disappearance until it was more than twenty-four hours overdue in Chicago. He said an earlier report would have started an immediate search and might have resulted in the rescue of the crew.

Prosecuting Attorney Clarence Lokker announced that inquiry also would be made into the condition of the life boats aboard the Andaste. He said a former member of the crew had reported that the ship's life boat davits were rusty. J. P. Mulligan, federal steamboat inspector at Grand Haven declared the Andaste was seaworthy when it was inspected by federal authorities last April.

The search for bodies of the crew was continued by coast guardsmen between Holland and Saugatuck. Only the bodies of Ralph Wiley second engineer, and Charles Brown, mate have been recovered.

ACCUSE SHERIFF OF ACCEPTING BRIBES

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 16.—Sheriff Maurice J. Caldwell of Scioto County, was to be arraigned here today on charges of bribery and embezzlement. He was indicted Saturday. Two of the bills, alleging bribery, charges Caldwell released one prisoner for $150 and another for $100. The embezzlement counts alleged the official misappropriated $801 belonging to a Richmond, Va., bank in connection with a land sale and $495 paid in by the federal government for boarding of federal prisoners. Caldwell denied the charges and was released on bond.

NEARLY SCORE MEET DEATH IN STATE SUNDAY

Airplanes Contribute To Death Toll On Week-End

By UNITED PRESS
The fatal injury of two youthful would-be aviators headed a long list of traffic deaths in Ohio over the week-end, according to a survey made by the United Press today.

Almost a score of persons were killed in airplane, automobile, train and other accidents. These were interspersed by several suicides and a few minor killings.

The plane victims were Melvin Hawkins, 17, Fostoria, a student flier, and Michael Kimes, 23, an apprentice brick-layer. They were fatally injured when a home-made plane owned by Harold Hickerson of Fostoria side-slipped at an altitude of 150 feet and crashed into a field near the Fostoria Airport. Both died Sunday.

Hickerson, verging on prostration today, said he asked young Hawkins not to take the ship up. Cleveland led in automobile fatalities with four dead, a fifth injured probably fatally and three others in a serious condition. The dead include Otto Kubeck, 23; Chester Saar, 11; Frank Volek, 35, of Avon, and an unidentified man.

Mrs. Mary Rose of Andover was killed when a hit skip motorist crashed into a car driven by the Rev. Leonard of Ashland near Andover. The preacher's car overturned, injuring three other persons.

At Patterson, James Hood, 53 of Carey, was killed when he lost control of his car and it crashed into a tree.

Francisco Hernandez, aged six weeks, of Rockford, was killed near Dayton when his father's car went into a ditch.

Mrs. Minnie B. Sase of Holland, was killed and three members of her family were injured when her automobile collided with another machine near Toledo. A daughter, Virginia, is not expected to live.

Near Cincinnati Moritz Guis-kunst, 60, was fatally injured when his automobile stalled on a hill, then rolled back and crashed into a tree.

William Brabs, 70, Curcise, was run down and fatally injured by a hit-skip driver.

Martin Ostko, 14, of Marblehead and Walter Hurst, 5, Marion, died from injuries received in separate accidents.

Harold Gartrell, 20, New Philadelphia amateur baseball player, was critically injured when his car crashed after he lost control of it. Edward Ricketts, 50, was killed at West Liberty when he was struck by a Big Four passenger train.

A man believed to be O. Crishman, 40, Cleveland, was found dead in a Youngstown hotel. Police said he swallowed poison.

FLAPPER BANDIT SLUGS HER VICTIM

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 16.—Another flapper bandit had been added today to the ever-increasing list of Toledo's feminine racketeers when a hard-boiled, two fisted amazon not only aided two companions in staging a holdup, but joined heartily in slugging the victim.

Joe Snay, Napoleon, Mich., the victim, told police he was driving early today when another machine forced him to the curb. A man leaped out and approached with a lever revolver, ordering Snay to put up his hands.

Snay refused and lunged at the highwayman, who grappled with him and called for aid.

A young girl and another man ran from the bandit car to assist their companion. The flapper fought viciously and finally the trio subdued Snay after he had beaten him severely. The robbers took $16, Snay's hat and coat, and fled.

GUNMEN KILL DRUGGIST, WOUND POLICEMAN DURING HOLD-UP

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 16.—Two daring gunmen who shot and killed the proprietor of an east side drug store during a holdup Sunday and later wounded a policeman who attempted to capture them still eluded police today.

Alvin Pope, 36, the druggist, was shot down as he knelt before the store safe in a darkened back-room after the gunmen demanded more than the $90 they found in the cash till.

After the shooting the robbers jumped into an automobile and sped away pursued by Patrolman Theodore Vanek. The officer captured one of the men, the bandit whipped out a gun and shot him when he relaxed his vigilance.

Vanek's life was believed saved by John Copeland, who accompanied him. Copeland knocked aside the bandit's gun as he fired and the bullet hit Vanek in the shoulder.

COUNTY CORN CROP ESTIMATED AT LESS THAN NORMAL YIELD

Prospect Is Below Aug. 1 Prospects Bureau Says

The corn crop of Greene County on September 1 was estimated at 61 per cent of normal as compared with 65 per cent on August first, according to a report issued from the Greene County Farm Bureau offices Monday.

Estimates for the state are 72 per cent on September first as compared with 76 per cent the first of August, 79 per cent on September 1, 1928, and 81 per cent the ten year average of September first.

In 1928, 136,725,000 bushels of corn were harvested in Ohio and based on this year's forecast the state will harvest 124,785,000 bushels.

The United States forecast of September 1 was 67.9 per cent of normal, making a forecast harvest of 2,455,997,000 bushels. This was eleven points lower than August 1, and 10.05 points below the 78.4 per cent reported a year ago. Ordinarily there was a decrease in condition of only two to three points over this period. The ten year average condition of corn for September first is 76.6 per cent.

The sharp decrease in prospect during August was due to the unusually dry conditions.

The prospective condition in the Eastern Corn Belt States is 16 per cent below last year's harvest, the Western corn belt states 17 per cent less, the South Atlantic states about 4 per cent higher than last year's short crop, while in the South Central states a decrease of 6 per cent was shown of the September forecast.

About six weeks remain in which to agree upon the place and scope of the conference because Japan must have ample time in which to appoint delegates and send them half way around the world. Intimations that simple extension of the 5-3 naval limitation to auxiliary ships will not meet the present situation already has come from Tokyo. Japan will desire a 10-10-7 ratio as between her auxiliary fleet and those of the United States and Great Britain.

France and Italy, likewise, are expected to demand a ratio in excess of the 5-3-1.75-1.75 which was their portion of the 1921 Washington arms conference and in submarines France and Italy may begin with a demand that they enjoy parity with the United States and Great Britain.

All these factors will bear upon the tentative Anglo-American agreement which would fix British cruiser tonnage was 340,000 and American at 305,000. The effort to lure all nations toward concessions is the prospect of saving money by curtailment of naval armaments.

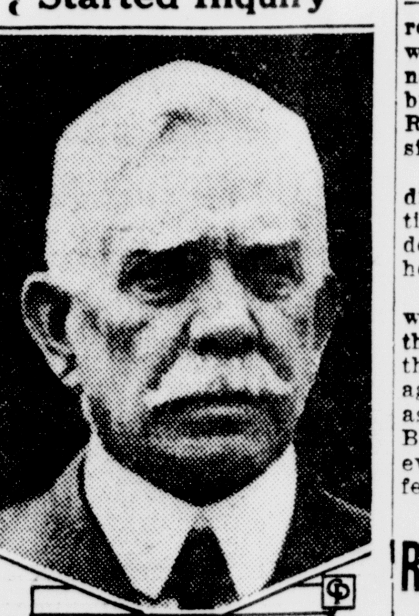

GEORGETOWN, O., Sept. 16.—Six persons, including two women, were questioned today in connection with the killing of Wada Vandermere of Cincinnati who was shot to death Saturday night during an alleged liquor party at Eastwood, near here.

Henry Neff, 63, at whose home the party was held, said the shooting was accidental and occurred while he was displaying a revolver. The bullet penetrated the girl's heart.

Sheriff John E. Neu who searched the house said he found a quantity of beer and whiskey.

Those questioned, in addition to Neff, were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Haas, Cincinnati, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill, and Hill's brother, Ray, all of Kings Mills, O., who attended the party.

Started Inquiry

Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, above, one of those responsible for President Hoover's insistence upon an investigation of the activities of William B. Shearer, armament expert, at the Geneva conference. Jones met Shearer at Geneva in 1927, and was angered by the activities of the alleged propagandist at that time.

EXPECTED STIMSON WILL CARRY BURDEN OF NAVY REDUCTION

Secretary Of State To Head Delegation To Conference

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Responsibility for carrying on President Hoover's naval reduction and limitation program has descended upon Secretary of State Stimson who is almost certain to head the American delegation to the conference proposed for early December.

London is usually likely to be the scene of the meeting between representatives of Great Britain, the United States, Japan, France, and Italy. The remainder of the American delegation will be composed of Ambassador Dawes, Ambassador Gibson, Admiral Hilary P. Jones, Admiral Andrew T. Long and Commander Train.

If Undersecretary of State Cotten can be spared simultaneously with Stimson, he will be among the American representatives.

Secretary of Navy Adams may be a member of the delegation.

The least Mr. Hoover can do in repayment of Premier MacDonald's visit to Washington will be to order his chief cabinet officer to return the courtesy. The president can not conveniently leave Washington for the length of time required for the trans-Atlantic journey even if it were deemed advisable to repeat Woodrow Wilson's ill-starred foreign travels.

Selection of a conference place will be made in an exchange of notes among London, Washington, Tokyo, Paris and Rome. The general outline of conference business must be agreed upon beforehand.

No difficulty is expected in reaching agreement because the Japanese, French and Italian governments have been kept informally advised of the progress of Anglo-American discussion.

About six weeks remain in which to agree upon the place and scope of the conference because Japan must have ample time in which to appoint delegates and send them half way around the world.

Intimations that simple extension of the 5-3 naval limitation to auxiliary ships will not meet the present situation already has come from Tokyo. Japan will desire a 10-10-7 ratio as between her auxiliary fleet and those of the United States and Great Britain.

France and Italy, likewise, are expected to demand a ratio in excess of the 5-3-1.75-1.75 which was their portion of the 1921 Washington arms conference and in submarines France and Italy may begin with a demand that they enjoy parity with the United States and Great Britain.

WIFE DRUNK 468 TIMES IS CLAIM

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 16.—Prohibition in Belmont County during the last three years came in for its share of publicity today when a petition was filed in court by a husband seeking divorce who alleged his wife had been intoxicated 468 times during a three-year period.

The petition was filed by Albert Cerneck, Bellaire, against Mrs. Cerneck. Grounds of drunkenness and extreme cruelty were mentioned as causes for estrangement.

Cerneck claimed "the defendant had been intoxicated at least three times a week for the last three years."

BRITISH SOLDIERS LEAVE RHINELAND

WIESBAUM, Germany, Sept. 16.—Scores of British soldiers were ready to depart for England today with their wives and children, signaling the first concerted move by Great Britain to evacuate the Rhineland zone it had occupied since early post-war days.

Advance parties of British soldiers already have left the occupation zone, and the first important detachment was expected to leave here some time today.

Those who left here yesterday were given a rousing farewell by the natives who sang "Tipperary," the song which more than a decade ago has been sung by the British as they went into battle. The whole British contingent is expected to evacuate this zone within the next few weeks.

REPORT 16 ARABS KILLED BY BRITISH

Pantages "Fixers" Land in Jail

Charged with attempting to "fix" witnesses in the Pantages-Pringle case in Los Angeles, Janice Hill (right) and Nancy Lee Hill (left) are now in jail. It is alleged that the girls moved into an apartment house where the state witnesses were living in order to influence their testimony through bribery.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S MURDER BLAMED ON CRIME VENGEANCE

BORGER, Tex., Sept. 16.—District Attorney John Holmes who set out to crush a crime element here which had flourished during the days when Borger was a "booming" oil village and lingered on after the prairie town became a well-established city will be buried today in a quiet ceremony at Panhandle, Tex.

Holmes, according to officers, had pushed his tireless investigations to the verge of a death blow against an entrenched underworld and the underworld removed him from its precincts. That was the version given of the fatal shooting of the militant district attorney Friday night.

He had stepped from his automobile at his home after staying late at the city hall, nearby. Three shots rang out and when Holmes' wife reached his side he was dead.

But there was every evidence here that the shots had failed to accomplish their purpose. Borger citizens clamored for arrest of the assassins and every agency of law was at work today to complete the crusade from which Holmes was removed. Authorities said they had definite clues to the identity of the slayers.

Holmes was to have appeared before the grand jury at Amarillo today to reveal his findings in cases he secretly investigated, and believed to involve prohibition law and Dyer act violations. Records of his investigations were gone over by officers who hoped to find preserved there the damaging knowledge against the underworld which had caused his death.

FOUR BANDITS RAID RESORT, SHOOT MAN

AKRON, O., Sept. 16.—Four bandits invaded Three Mile House, a highway resort near here, Sunday night, shot and wounded Steve Pierson, an employee, when he attempted to remonstrate with them, and drove away in an automobile.

The robbery, carried out with calm precision, was the second of sensational nature in twenty-four hours. Saturday night a trio of bandits entered a cigar store, forced the occupants to a room in them. Two dozen persons were victimized.

The loot from both robberies aggregated $1500 in jewelry, furs and cash. The furs were taken from the women in the roadhouse.

Pierson, after being shot in the abdomen, lay on the floor writhing in agony, while the robbers consumed more than forty minutes going through their victims' pockets. He is expected to recover.

PRISONERS ESCAPE

HAMILTON, O., Sept. 16.—Four men who escaped from the Eaton, O., jail over the week end, were sought in this section today. The men were reported to be John McKenney charged with burglary; Roy Mills, attack; Russell Puckett, bigamy, and Everett Hall, grand larceny. The prisoners cut their way from the jail with saws believed smuggled in to them. The jail is on the top floor of the new courthouse.

BANDIT SHOTS MAN

DAYTON, O., Sept. 16.—A Negro bandit who shot and wounded Lee Howard, 26, street car motorman, when Howard resisted him was the object of an intensive police search today. Howard, shot in the right wrist and left hip, is expected to recover.

ANTI-COMMUNISTS HELD AFTER MOTHER OF FIVE IS KILLED

Crime Continues To Feature Textile Strike

GASTONIA, N. C., Sept. 16.—After examination of more than thirty witnesses in which the tragic story of the killing of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, mother of five children, during an anti-union demonstration near here Saturday afternoon, had been pieced together, seven men were held under $1,000 bond today, charged with the killing.

Six of the seven, employees of the Manville-Jencks cotton mill, were identified by witnesses as being present when the shooting occurred. They were turned over to the sheriff with instructions to hold them under bond.

They were: George Lingerfelt, L. M. Sossman, Will Lurchford, Lowery Davis, Theodore Sims, Troy Jones and P. C. Morrow.

According to testimony given at an all day inquest here yesterday Mrs. Wiggins and twenty-one others, all mill workers and union strikers, were riding in an open truck enroute to their homes in Bessemer City, near here, when a group of anti-unionists dashed by the truck, caused it to collide with another car and as the machines crashed a shot was fired.

The woman, crying, "Oh, Lordy, I'm shot and killed," crumpled to the floor of the truck.

At the moment of the crash J. D. McLennan testified: "I heard the guns pop just as we hit. A car pulled opposite the truck and went on by." It is believed the shot that killed Mrs. Wiggins was fired from this car.

Mrs. Mary Jones the only other woman in the truck, testified she was standing near Mrs. Wiggins when the shot was fired. "The jar of hittin' sort of threwed me together but I saw a man in the field standin' and shootin'. Bullets was a flyin' every which way so I ducked afore they shot me," Mrs. Jones said.

A large man with frousted hair, was very nervous as he told of recognizing a man named Jack Carver and Mr. Sossman come up to the men that were surrounding the truck and told them: "That's all right boys don't shoot 'em any more."

Witnesses told of seeing several strangers who fired upon the fleeing strikers as they scrambled across cotton fields.

The coroner's inquest will be resumed Saturday. The men now under arrest will have to await the extra regular term of superior court to be investigated by the grand jury which does not convene until October 20.

In the meantime a private investigation will be conducted by county officials in an attempt to learn the identity of the person who fired the specific shot which killed Mrs. Wiggins.

SEWER GAS BLAST INJURES FIFTEEN

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Two severe explosions, believed to have come from gas collecting in sewers, ripped two blocks of the business section today and caused injury to fifteen persons.

Only one of those injured is considered serious.

Fifty buildings were damaged. Plate glass windows were blown out and store supplies jarred to the floor. In some cases persons reported they were blown out of the front of the buildings.

William S. Green, owner of a book shop, was the most seriously injured. He was blown from the front of his shop into an automobile parked nearby.

Edward Ricketts, 50, was killed at West Liberty when he was struck by a Big Four passenger train.

A man believed to be O. Crishman, 40, Cleveland, was found dead in a Youngstown hotel. Police said he swallowed poison.

FLAPPER BANDIT SLUGS HER VICTIM

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 16.—Another flapper bandit had been added today to the ever-increasing list of Toledo's feminine racketeers when a hard-boiled, two-fisted amazon not only aided, two companions in staging a holdup, but joined heartily in slugging the victim.

Joe Snay, Napoleon, Mich., the victim, told police he was driving early today when another machine forced him to the curb. A man leaped out and approached with a lever revolver, ordering Snay to get up his hands.

Snay refused and lunged at the highwayman, who grappled with him and called for aid.

A young girl and another man ran from the bandit car to assist their companion. The flapper fought viciously and finally the trio subdued Snay after they had beaten him severely. The robbers took $16, Snay's hat and coat, and fled.

GUNMEN KILL DRUGGIST, WOUND POLICEMAN DURING HOLD-UP

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 16.—Two daring gunmen who shot and killed the proprietor of an east side drug store during a holdup Sunday and later wounded a policeman who attempted to capture them still eluded police today.

Alvin Pope, 36, the druggist, was shot down as he knelt before the store safe in a darkened back-room after the gunmen demanded more than the $90 they found in the cash till.

After the shooting the robbers jumped into an automobile and sped away pursued by Patrolman Theodore Vanek. The officer captured one of the men but the bandit whipped out a gun and shot him when he relaxed his vigilance.

Vanek's life was believed saved by John Copeland, who accompanied him. Copeland knocked aside the bandit's gun as he fired and the bullet hit Vanek in the shoulder.

COUNTY CORN CROP ESTIMATED AT LESS THAN NORMAL YIELD

Prospect Is Below Aug. 1 Prospects Bureau Says

The corn crop of Greene County on September 1 was estimated at 61 per cent of normal as compared with 65 per cent on August first, according to a report issued from the Greene County Farm Bureau offices Monday.

Estimates for the state are 72 per cent on September first as compared with 76 per cent the first of August, 79 per cent on September 1, 1928 and 81 per cent the ten year average of September first.

In 1928, 136,725,000 bushels of corn were harvested in Ohio and based on this year's forecast the state will harvest 124,755,000 bushels.

The United States forecast of September 1 was 67.9 per cent of normal, making a forecast harvest of 2,455,997,000 bushels. This was eleven points lower than August 1, and 10.05 points below the 78.4 per cent reported a year ago. Ordinarily there was a decrease in condition of only two to three points over this period. The ten year average condition of corn for September first is 76.8 per cent.

The sharp decrease in prospect during August was due to the unusually dry conditions.

The prospective condition in the Eastern Corn Belt states is 16 per cent below last year's harvest, the Western corn belt states 17 per cent less, the South Atlantic states about 4 per cent higher than last year's crop, while the South Central states a decrease of 6 per cent was shown of the September forecast.

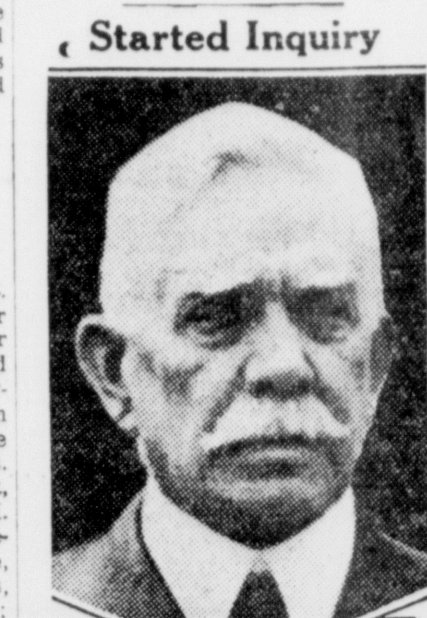

GIRL SHOT DURING DRINKING PARTY

GEORGETOWN, O., Sept. 16.—Six persons, including two women, were questioned today in connection with the killing of Wada Vandermere of Cincinnati who was shot to death Saturday night during an alleged liquor party at Eastwood, near here.

Henry Neff, 63, at whose home the party was held, said the shooting was accidental and occurred while he was displaying a revolver. The bullet penetrated the girl's heart.

Sheriff John E. Neu who searched the house said he found a quantity of beer and whiskey. Those questioned, in addition to Neff, were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Haas, Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hill, and Hill's brother, Ray, all of Kings Mills, O., who attended the party.

Started Inquiry

Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, above, one of those responsible for President Hoover's insistence upon an investigation of the activities of William B. Shearer, armament expert, at the Geneva conference. Jones met Shearer at Geneva in 1927, and was angered by the activities of the alleged propagandist at that time.

EXPECTED STIMSON WILL CARRY BURDEN OF NAVY REDUCTION

Secretary Of State To Head Delegation To Conference

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Responsibility for carrying on President Hoover's naval reduction and limitation program has descended upon Secretary of State Stimson who is almost certain to head the American delegation to the conference proposed for early December.

London is equally likely to be the scene of the meeting between representatives of Great Britain, the United States, Japan, France, and Italy. The remainder of the American delegation will be composed of Ambassador Dawes, Ambassador Gibson, Admiral Hilary P. Jones, Admiral Andrew T. Long and Commander Train.

If Undersecretary of State Cotton can be spared simultaneously with Stimson, he will be among the American representatives. Secretary of Navy Adams may be a member of the delegation.

The least Mr. Hoover can do in repayment of Premier MacDonald's visit to Washington will be to order his chief cabinet officer to return the courtesy. The president cannot conveniently leave Washington for the length of time required for the trans-Atlantic journey even if it were deemed advisable to repeat Woodrow Wilson's ill-starred foreign travels.

Selection of a conference place will be made in an exchange of notes among London, Washington, Tokyo, Paris and Rome. The general outline of conference business must be agreed upon beforehand. No difficulty is expected in reaching agreement because the Japanese, French and Italian governments have been kept informally advised of the progress of Anglo-American discussion.

About six weeks remain in which to agree upon the place and scope of the conference because Japan must have ample time in which to appoint delegates and send them half way around the world. Intimations that simple extension of the 5-5-3 naval limitation to auxiliary ships will not meet the present situation already has come from Tokyo. Japan will desire a 10-10-7 ratio as between her auxiliary fleet and those of the United States and Great Britain.

France and Italy, likewise, are expected to demand a ratio in excess of the 5-5-3-1.75-1.75 which was their portion of the 1921 Washington arms conference and in submarines France and Italy may begin with a demand that they enjoy parity with the United States and Great Britain.

All these factors will bear upon the tentative Anglo-American agreement which would fix British cruiser tonnage was 340,000 and American at 305,000. The effort to lure all nations toward concessions is the prospect of saving money by curtailment of naval armaments.

BRITISH SOLDIERS LEAVE RHINELAND

WIESBAUM, Germany, Sept. 16.—Scores of British soldiers were ready to depart for England today with their wives and children, signaling the first concerted move by Great Britain to evacuate the Rhineland zone it had occupied since early post-war days.

Advance parties of British soldiers already have left the occupation zone, and the first important detachment was expected to leave here some time today.

Those who left here yesterday were given a rousing farewell by the natives who sang "Tipperary," the song which more than a decade ago had been sung by the British as they went into battle. The whole British contingent is expected to evacuate this zone within the next few weeks.

REPORT 16 ARABS KILLED BY BRITISH

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Jerusalem dispatches to the London Daily Chronicle today said sixteen Arabs were killed and many others were wounded in a running fight with British troops between Lubieh and Hattin, northeast of Nazareth. There were no British casualties. Many other Arabs surrendered and were disarmed.

Pantages "Fixers" Land in Jail

Charged with attempting to "fix" witnesses in the Pantages-Pringle case in Los Angeles, Janice Hill (right) and Nancy Lee Hill (left) are now in jail. It is alleged that the girls moved into an apartment house where the state witnesses were living in order to influence their testimony through bribery.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S MURDER BLAMED ON CRIME VENGEANCE

BORGER, Tex., Sept. 16.—District Attorney John Holmes who set out to crush a crime element here which had flourished during the days when Borger was a "booming" oil village and lingered on after the prairie town became a well-established city will be buried today in a quiet ceremony at Panhandle, Tex.

Holmes, according to investigators, had pushed his tireless efforts to the verge of a death blow against an entrenched underworld and the underworld removed him from its precincts. That was the version given of the fatal shooting of the militant district attorney Friday night.

He had stepped from his automobile at his home after staying late at the city hall, nearby. Three shots rang out and when Holmes' wife reached his side he was dead.

But there was every evidence here that the shots had failed to accomplish their purpose. Borger citizens clamored for arrest of the assassins and every agency of law was at work today to complete the crusade from which Holmes was removed. Authorities said they had definite clues to the identity of the slayers.

Holmes was to have appeared before the grand jury at Amarillo today to reveal his findings in cases he secretly investigated, and believed to involve prohibition law and Dyer act violations. Records of his investigations were gone over by officers who hoped to find preserved there the damaging knowledge against the underworld which had caused his death.

WIFE DRUNK 468 TIMES IS CLAIM

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 16.—Prohibition in Belmont county during the last three years came in for its share of publicity today when a petition was filed in court by a husband seeking divorce who alleged his wife had been intoxicated 468 times during a three-year period.

The petition was filed by Albert Cerneck, Bellaire, against Mrs. Cerneck, Bellaire, against drunkenness and extreme cruelty were mentioned as causes for estrangement.

Cerneck claimed "the defendant had been intoxicated at least three times a week for the last three years."

AUTO HITS HOUSE; WOMAN IS INJURED

Thrown forward against the windshield, Mrs. John Dickerson, Cleveland, O., had several teeth knocked out and her face cut when a sedan driven by her husband vaulted over the sidewalk and crashed into the residence of Robert Gagner after the driver had attempted to make too short a turn south on West St. from Main St. early Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Dickerson was taken to the office of Dr. Marshall Best for treatment. Dickerson and his two children, Burna and William, were unhurt. The car was badly smashed and the brick and stucco wall of the house was also damaged. Dickerson paid Gagner $5 for the damage to the house.

The Dickersons were enroute from Cleveland to Louisville, Ky. Patrolman Fred Jones investigated the accident.

PRISONERS ESCAPE

HAMILTON, O., Sept. 16.—Four men who escaped from the Eaton, O., jail over the week end, were sought in this section today. The prisoners cut their way from the jail with saws believed smuggled in to them. The jail is on the top floor of the new courthouse.

ANTI-COMMUNISTS HELD AFTER MOTHER OF FIVE IS KILLED

Crime Continues To Feature Textile Strike

GASTONIA, N. C., Sept. 16.—After examination of more than thirty witnesses in which the tragic story of the killing of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, mother of five children, during an anti-union demonstration near here Saturday afternoon, had been pieced together, seven men were held under $1,000 bond today, charged with the killing.

Six of the seven, employees of the Manville-Jencks cotton mill, were identified by witnesses as being present when the shooting occurred. They were turned over to the sheriff with instructions to hold them under bond.

They were: George Lingerfelt, L. M. Sossman, Will Lurchford, Lowery Davis, Theodore Sims, Troy Jones and F. C. Morrow.

According to testimony given at an all day inquest here yesterday, Mrs. Wiggins and twenty-one others, all mill workers and union strikers, were riding in an open truck enroute to their homes in Bessemer City, near here, when a group of anti-unionists dashed by the truck, caused it to collide with another car and as the machines crashed a shot was fired.

The woman, crying, "Oh, Lordy, I'm shot and killed, crumpled to the floor of the truck."

At the moment of the crash J. D. McLennan testified: "I heard the guns pop just as we hit. A car pulled opposite the truck and went on by." It is believed the shot that killed Mrs. Wiggins was fired from this car.

Mrs. Mary Jones the only other woman in the truck, testified she was standing near Mrs. Wiggins when the shot was fired. "The jar of hittin' sort of threw us all together but I saw a man in the field standin' and shootin'. Bullets was a flyin' every which way so I ducked after they shot me," Mrs. Jones said.

A large man with fringed hair, was very nervous as he told of recognizing "a man named Jack Carver and Mr. Sossoman come up to the men that were surrounding the truck and told them. 'That's all right boys don't shoot 'em any more.'"

Witnesses told of seeing several strangers who fired upon the fleeing strikers as they scrambled across cotton fields.

The coroner's inquest will be resumed Saturday. The men now under arrest will have to await the extra regular term of superior court to be investigated by the grand jury which does not convene until October 20.

In the meantime a private investigation will be conducted by county officials in an attempt to learn the identity of the person who fired the specific shot which killed Mrs. Wiggins.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 16.—After a week-end frought with excitement in Gastonia where a woman textile stricker was shot and killed by anti-Communists, interest in the labor troubles of the South turned again today to Charlotte where Judge T. J. Shaw was to resume investigation of the fourteen men charged with kidnapping three union organizers.

The case against eight union members charged with "disseminating Communism" also was scheduled to be taken up today by the city recorder's office. The men were arrested last Friday night at a boarding house here where they were caught in the act of transporting loaded firearms.

The killing at Gastonia Saturday and the arrest of Liston Oak, publicity director for the International Labor Defense, adds two more court cases to the complicated affairs here. Oak was charged with carrying concealed weapons.

SEWER GAS BLAST INJURES FIFTEEN

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Two severe explosions, believed to have come from gas collecting in sewers, ripped two blocks of the business section today and caused injury to fifteen persons.

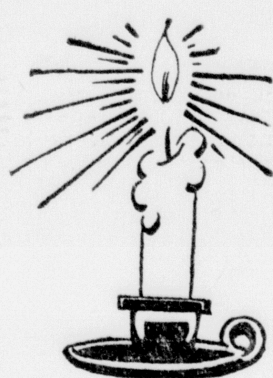

Only one of those injured is considered serious. Fifty buildings were damaged. Plate glass windows were blown out and store supplies jarred to the floor. In some blown out of the front of the buildings.

William S. Green, owner of a book shop, was the most seriously injured. He was blown from the front of his shop into an automobile parked nearby.

FARMERS MEET TO PROTEST TRUCK LAW

Farmers of Greene County are invited to attend a meeting at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the assembly room at the Court House, called to discuss the question of whether a new state trucking law which became effective last June, applies to farmers, preventing them, it is alleged, from extending help to each other.

The Tuesday meeting is an outgrowth of a similar meeting called a month ago by C. K. Wolf, Beaver Creek Twp., farmer and truck owner. Greene County farmers who have investigated the provisions of the law claim that it deprives farmers of the right they have heretofore had to use the roads without first obtaining a certificate from the public utilities commission.

A large attendance is desired at the meeting Tuesday night.

COUNTY SPORTSMEN INVADE FIELDS FOR SQUIRRELS MONDAY

Greene County sportsmen took to the fields Monday, the opening date of the squirrel and duck hunting season. The squirrel season closes October 1 and the shooting of ducks ends December 31.

The law prohibits the sale of squirrels and the bag limit is four for one day.

Hunters are looking forward to a good squirrel shooting season this year as fox squirrels are reported plentiful in Greene, Fayette, Ross, Franklin, Delaware, Madison, Montgomery and Shelby Counties.

While the law says that the season officially opened September 15 squirrels could not be taken legally until Monday, the 16th, as Sunday is closed time on all game.

John W. Thompson, chief of the division of fish and game, urged hunters to carry their licenses with them when afield with a gun and to exhibit both licenses and game to any game protector upon request, as it is the duty of the protector to make inspection of licenses and game.

"The protectors are expected to work in a friendly way and not in a hostile manner," Thompson said. "They are trying to make better hunting and fishing conditions for the sportsmen, who maintain the fish and game division through their license money. I urge all hunters to seek permission before entering lands of another, and to be courteous to the farmer and respectful of his property rights. Hunters should refrain from shooting in fields where livestock may be disturbed or endangered."

Eleven hunter's licenses were sold at the county clerk of courts' office Saturday. This was below normal but is explained by the fact that local hardware stores are also handling the licenses this year under the new law which permits the township clerks to designate persons to have charge of the license distribution.

GROGERS' ALLIANCE CONTINUES TO GROW CONVENTION SHOWS

The second national convention of the Independent Grocers' Alliance of America, familiarly known as the "I. G. A." was held at West Baden, Ind., the first of the month, and was preceded by the Central League convention.

The "I. G. A." is now the second largest in chain food distributing volume in the United States, and it is believed that by March, 1930, the organization will have a chance of being the largest.

The "I. G. A." has been organized only three years and has increased rapidly. There are more than 8,000 stores in thirty-eight of the forty-eight states in this country; and there are 150 large manufacturing companies connected with the organization.

It was agreed at the meeting, that the organization should make all retail lines follow in the grocers' steps and buy in trainload and shipload quantities, receiving all merchandise in one shipment and the one salesman cost, offsetting the district manager expense of the unit chain.

H. E. Eavey, president of The Eavey Co., Xenia and Richmond, Ind., buys all the food purveyed by the I. G. A. throughout the nation; the distribution being handled through five "Leagues," Eastern, Northern, Western, Southern and Central. The executive officers of J. Frank Grimes, organizer and president of the I. G. A. are in Chicago.

If you have a place for some of these chicks it will be to your financial advantage to invest in a few of them at once.

We have some chicks left over from other previous hatches that range in age from a week to two weeks. These started chicks are really a better buy than the day olds as they have a better chance to live and will grow faster from now on.

EIGHTY SEEK POSTS WITH OHIO STATE'S VARSITY GRIDDEES

Willaman Has Task Of Creating Team From Unknowns

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 16.—Eighty candidates for coveted positions on Ohio State University's varsity football squad passed under the critical gaze of Head Coach Sam Willaman today as fall practice got under way.

Thirteen days of intensive work-out were on schedule before classes formally open, Oct. 1, and those thirteen days were expected to determine in large measure, the scarlet and gray's chances in the Big Ten titular race.

Most of last year's veterans are missing, due to graduation, and state's championship possibilities, at the best, are not considered rosy.

For the first time in more than a decade, Dr. J. W. Wilce, whom Willaman succeeded as head coach, was not on the field and the athletes appeared under an almost entirely new management and board of strategy.

Willaman, with the material available, admittedly has a hard task before him but he was confident that the Bucks will be counted among the noses at or near the top when Turkey Day brings an end to the season.

Mrs. Annie Besant Still Leads Theosophists

GATHERING of the Theosophical Society in Chicago in convention again centers attention on Mrs. Annie Besant, aged leader of the assemblage. She attracted international notice several years ago when she brought Jiddu Krishnamurti, a young Hindu, to the United States, seeking to have Theosophists recognize him as the "New Messiah."

Mrs. Besant was born in England in 1847 and was educated privately in England, Germany and France. After joining the National Secular Society in 1874 she worked in Free Thought and radical movements under the leadership of Charles Bradlaugh, M. P. Later she became interested in labor and socialist movements, and took an active part in the Trades Union work among unskilled laborers, and with Herbert Burrows led the great match strike to a successful conclusion.

In 1883 Mrs. Besant became identified with the Theosophical Society and became a devoted pupil of Mme. Blavatsky. She since has traveled to all parts of the globe spreading its gospel. In 1907 she was chosen as president, and was again re-elected in 1914 and 1921.

She has founded several schools for girls in Benares, India, and was made a doctor of literature by the University of Benares in recognition of her services in the field of education. She has written many books on mysticism.

DOWN in a green and shady bed
A modest violet grew;
Its stalk was bent, it hung its head,
As if to hide from view.

And yet it was a lovely flower,
Its colors bright and fair;
It might have graced a rosy bower,
Instead of hiding there.

Yet there it was content to bloom,
In modest tints arrayed;
And there diffused a sweet perfume,
Within the silent shade.

Then let me to the valley go,

That I may also learn to grow
In sweet humility.

Mrs. Annie Besant Still Leads Theosophists

GATHERING of the Theosophist Society in Chicago in convention again centers attention on Mrs. Annie Besant, aged leader of the assemblage. She attracted international notice several years ago when she brought Jiddu Krishnamurti, a young Hindu, to the United States, seeking to have Theosophists recognize him as the "New Messiah."

Mrs. Besant was born in England in 1847 and was educated privately in England, Germany and France. After joining the National Secular Society in 1874 she worked in Free Thought and radical movements under the leadership of Charles Bradlaugh, M. P. Later she became interested in labor and socialist movements, and took an active part in the Trades Union work among unskilled laborers, and with Herbert Burrows led the great match strike to a successful conclusion.

In 1889 Mrs. Besant became identified with the Theosophical Society and became a devoted pupil of Mme. Blavatsky. She since has traveled to all parts of the globe spreading its gospel. In 1907 she was chosen as president, and was again re-elected in 1914 and 1921.

She has founded several schools for girls in Benares, India, and was made a doctor of literature by the University of Benares in recognition of her services in the field of education. She has written many books on mysticism.

Poems that Live

THE VIOLET

DOWN in a green and shady bed
A modest violet grew;
Its stalk was bent, it hung its head,
As if to hide from view.

And yet it was a lovely flower,
Its colors bright and fair;
It might have graced a rosy bower,
Instead of hiding there.

Yet there it was content to bloom,
In modest tints arrayed;
And there diffused a sweet perfume,
Within the silent shade.

Then let me to the valley go,
This pretty flower to see;
That I may also learn to grow
In sweet humility.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

TRUE GREATNESS—At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst of them. And said, Verily, I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. — Matthew 18:1, 2, 3.

GANGSTER YARNS

A young man arrested in a small village for an attempt to hold up a bank is reported to have said that his downfall came from reading detective stories. That may or may not be true. If it is, the excuse advanced by the accused does not in the least relieve him of responsibility. No matter how many, or what sort of detective yarns he may have perused, he still knew the difference between right and wrong, and understood perfectly well that bank robbery is a serious misdeed.

At the same time it unquestionably is true that many inexcusable stories dealing with the underworld and its inhabitants are being printed, even in presumably reputable magazines, and some are more undesirable than even the much advertised "sex stuff." These stories are not, however, detective stories in the older meaning of the term. They are gangster yarns and are almost as likely to make a hero out of some murderous thug as they are to paint him in his true, unlovely colors.

Such legends must inevitably do a great deal of harm when they are read by young people with inferior minds and morals and little background; and those who print them are taking upon their shoulders a great deal of serious responsibility for possible crime.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The story back of "Journey's End," one of the biggest Broadway hits in years, is much the same as that of other great stage successes. Several producers read the play and turned it down. At the end of this month 16 companies will be playing the show in seven languages.

When Phil Dunning wrote "Broadway" he hawked it around The Lane collecting a bunch of managerial raspberries. Al Woods sent the manuscript back with this message scrawled across the front page: "Not with my dough, sweetheart."

Even Sir James Barrie, "Peter Pan's" papa, in the early days of his career, experienced the frustration. His initial play, "The Professor's Love Story," was unceremoniously turned down by the first manager who read it. Later, when Barrie had chalked his name on the Barn Door of Fame, the manager who had turned down his first play remarked: "How the devil did I know he was a genius?"

NO SHOW FOR TAXPAYERS

Jimmy Walker and Major La Guardia, his opponent in the current mayoralty contest, came face to face, unexpectedly, at dinner the other night. They're both pretty quick on the "draw." Everything crowded around to hear the fun. And this is what happened: They shook hands and each smiled a smile of moderate hilarity.

"Hello," said the Major.

"Hello," replied the Genial Jas. When Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate, heard about it he remarked:

"That's a nice way to treat the taxpayers, isn't it?"

HOW "EVERYBODY" KNOWS

The apartment is leased to "Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Smith," but they're Mr. and Mrs. Smith in name only. If you get what I mean. He is one of the biggest playing wifes and some daughters studying abroad. "Mrs. Smith" is the wife of a pompous little banker, with frog eyes who thinks that when he stands in the east, the west tips up.

Both "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" are such prominent figures in town that they dare not court exposure by registering at a hotel for their one-afternoon-a-week rendezvous. Hotel detectives have been known to foment blackmail. Thus, the "exclusive" love nest in the "exclusive" neighborhood.

A couple of ex-Follies Girls live directly opposite, sharing an "exclusive" love nest of their own. Their living room windows command an uninterrupted view of the living room of the "Smith" apartment across the way.

One of the visitors to the Gilded House of Mirth is a gentleman named Bjones. He has offices in Wall Street, with branches scattered from here to the coast. He was sitting in the House of Mirth when, chancing to glance across the street, he saw "Smith."

"Damm!" ejaculated Bjones, "if I ain't old friend—"

He mentioned "Smith's" real name. Ziegfeld's Graduate was inquisitive. Brother Bjones was loquacious.

That's how come Broadway heard the story.

The only three people in town who aren't wise yet, are "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" and "Mr. Smith's" missus.

The works are due to "go up" any day now.

EXPLAINING MAE

The next time you experience a longing to be kind to something or somebody, don't stroke the head of Charlie, the cat. Instead, give a thought to Mae West—Ethel Barrymore's only rival.

Nobody understands Mae West. She says so herself.

It was a "misunderstanding" that landed her in the "can" for producing a play called "Sex." It was a "misunderstanding" that prompted the cops to suppress her next effort, "Drag." And a final "misunderstanding" will place her on trial next month for putting on a show called "Pleasure Man."

"I have been accused of deliberately appealing to the evil-minded," mourns Diamond Lil. "As a matter of fact, I regard the stage as a medium for sex education; and I'm always one jump ahead of public teachers."

Mother, may I learn about wimmin from Mae?

LOAN VULTURE SHARKS
News comes that a small loan concern has been charging a woman interest of $2.20 every two weeks on a loan of $22. The arrest of the loan broker is ordered. There ought to be a crusade, kept up as long as necessary, in every city in the land to drive out of business every pirate of this stripe. There are reputable banks where men and women of good character, hard pressed for funds, can make loans at reasonable interest rates.

WHAT IS A THING WORTH?
What is a thing worth? There is no such thing as standard value. A thing may be worth much to you and little to the next fellow. Value is determined by desire. How badly do you want a thing? How nearly overpowering is your desire that will determine what you will say.

Gertrude Sanford, New York society girl, returns from an animal hunting expedition in the far corners of the earth, accompanied by representatives of the American Museum of Natural History. An Abyssinian chieftain gave her four baboons and three mountain monkeys for a bottle of brandy. Baboons and mountain monkeys bought by any zoo, cost much money. Brandy bought from the nearest bootlegger, is not high. But the chieftain wanted brandy. His desire fixed the value.

Don't say wildly and thoughtlessly for things. Analyze your desire. Be sure how badly you want what you think you want. Value is a delicate instrument. Don't play fast and loose with it.

SCANDINAVIANS

One note in the news that Theodore Christian is governor of Minnesota. Some years ago John Johnson was governor of the same state. Both of Scandinavian descent. Go into the northwest and note that the country is made desirable and prosperous by the contributions of the posterity of a great Scandinavian immigration. Norwegians, Swedes, Danes make sterling citizens. The United States will ever be in debt to Northern Europe.

VICTORY IN THE MIND

Victory in the mind is the main thing. Victory in behavior, victory in action, follow naturally. Make your decision and make it boldly, without reservations, honestly, even though it hurts. Once you have achieved victory in the mind, the rest is over.

Seized with the gambling mania, poor men who have nothing to lose play around the edges of big money. They lean over too far and then have to rush for help to meet their debts. There are many other crazes, many wild desires, many unrolled impulses. Playing around the edges is not merely an exciting game. It is not even taking a chance. On the contrary it is the almost certain path to some big mistake that may cost everything. Decide, in the mind, the course you mean to follow—and walk on.

EFFORTS TO RETAIN OLDER WORKMEN SAID TO BE PROGRESSING

By JAMES J. DAVIS

Secretary of Labor.

(James J. Davis was born in Tredgar, South Wales, Oct. 27, 1873. He was educated in the public schools and later took a business course for several months. He holds honorary degrees from two American universities. He came to the United States with his parents in 1891 and began working as a puddler's assistant in an iron works at Sharon, Pa., and later in Pittsburgh. He moved to Elwood, Ind., in 1903 and worked in steel and tin plate mills there. He was elected director general of the Loyal Order of Moose in 1906 and was appointed secretary of labor in 1921. He founded the Mooseheart Home and School at Mooseheart, Ill.)

Considerable progress has been made of late to offset the false theory that youth, rather than the experience and age of seasoned workers, best serves the needs of production.

The department of labor has received reports from European countries describing the peculiar migration of workers from farm to city; and, to some extent, the same change has been taking place here. Consequently, city industries have been physically taxed to furnish employment for the augmenting farm labor, while in many agricultural sections, actual farm labor shortages have existed.

I cannot here even scratch the surface of description of what the doing in the constant displacement of men. But let us go back even half a century and visualize again the shoemaker, who, in those good old days, made shoes and every part of them, from toe to heel. The man who claims to be a shoemaker today, and who uses modern machine means of manufacture, makes only a part of a shoe. What was once a trade in itself is now a multiplicity of trades. Once there were shoemakers, but now we have virtually 20 specialized occupations, from which the shoe emerges, from toe to heel, and each artisan, with his machine, calls himself a shoemaker.

The village blacksmith shop and the country tailor shop have given way to the steam hammer and the planing and slotting machine, and one week of hard labor has turned into one hour of the whirl of machine whirrs.

Unemployment is consequently ever present because of these and other causes which are constantly recurring; and it is to these problems that we must apply our very best thought if we would see no break in the tremendous progress of industry or in our great national soul of tolerance toward all

THERE'S ONE THING THEY'RE UNITED ON ANYHOW

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

This series of articles on fashion in feminine beauty would not be complete without a word of warning about the danger of following any beauty fashion less wisely than well.

Perfect beauty is never standardized. The rare and lovely, and altogether satisfactory type of beautiful woman is always individual looking. Her beauty is the more interesting because no other can imitate it entirely. It is her own exclusive property. She adapts each style to suit herself. If fashion says straight hair is the vogue and hers looks more becoming waved, she wears it waved, but she chooses some style of hair-dressing that is in keeping with the fashion. If Paris says "higher waists" and a higher waistline is definitely unbecoming to her figure, she keeps her waistline becomingly low, yet as high as she can wear it; or balances it with an Eton jacket effect, or some other high waistline illusion.

Cosmetics are quite as important as clothes to fashions in beauty. The correct and becoming make-up should be both fashionable and individual. If dark, gypsy powders and bright rouge are not suited to a woman's coloring or costume, she will not affect them simply because they are the fashion. Golden or tawny powders and light tangerine or coral rouge will prove pleasant modifications of this style in complexions.

One unfailing rule for making a success of your own individual type of beauty is to keep it in fashion in a way that pleases you. The colors and lines and modes that harmonize with your own fancy are most likely to flatter your appearance. And remember, beauty demands fitness to the surroundings and occasion. What passes for beauty in the city may not be so attractive in a rural setting. The best type of good looks, or beauty, is the type that is wholesome, healthy and individually adaptable to prevailing fashion.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—If William B. Shearer has been a press agent for armament-makers all these years, he has been a dandy.

A press agent's job is to get favorable publicity for his employers. Shearer got oodles of pro-armament publicity—whether he did it as a press agent or not. Assuming that certain armament makers had agreed to pay him for his services and then reneged, as he says they did, no wonder he was sore.

Bill did not overestimate, in considering his work high art. Professional navy men agreed in recognizing him as one of the world's foremost armament authorities.

His judgment has had more weight than the professionals'—partly because he has been free to express himself as he pleased, while they always are more or less muzzled by regulations; partly because, being an outsider, everyone has taken it for granted that he was disinterested—God save the mark, if he has been a press agent all the time.

Press agency like this is worthy of its hire.

It would seem also that modern methods of production have caused some employers to believe that youth, rather than the experience and age of seasoned workers, best serves the needs of production. Consequently, at inopportune times, there have been discharged at middle age many veteran workers of ability, experience and settled habits, who thus face the necessity of an untoward adjustment at the age of 45 or 50 years.

Of late, some progress has been made in offsetting this false theory, and I shall continue to take every opportunity to emphasize the importance of retaining in employment those who have demonstrated through a long work period that they are entitled to the fullest employment considerations.

Unemployment is consequently ever present because of these and other causes which are constantly recurring; and it is to these problems that we must apply our very best thought if we would see no break in the tremendous progress of industry or in our great national soul of tolerance toward all

Still, such a press agent often is thoroughly loyal to the cause he represents. Perhaps he feels that he owes no loyalty elsewhere; that his mission's righteousness justifies him in fooling people, if necessary, into a belief in it.

But the chap who takes money from the public, for furnishing it with supposedly unbiased information?—while, at the same time, taking money from some special interest, to flavor his output with that interest's propaganda?

Not one good excuse is available in his defense.

The question is: If Bill Shearer was in the armament makers' pay, was he in their pay alone—in which case perhaps he is entitled to benefit of clergy. Or was he accepting the public's nickels and dimes on the one hand?—and the armament makers' thousands of dollars, simultaneously, on the other hand?—in which event it is hard to see how he is going to explain his policy to the satisfaction of any right-minded person.

Daniel F. Cohan, Bill's lawyer, is quoted to the effect that Bill was sincere concerning the navy, anyway.

That makes no difference. If Bill was working for the public, he had no business to be working for the armament makers—and vice versa.

It does not make much difference, either, what is revealed by the senate naval affairs committee's investigations of Shearer's lawsuit against the armament makers.

The essential fact is that the two inquiries are sure to result in two unusually black eyes for the big navy folk.

Suspicion of armament makers is widespread, at best. For a long while to come, the minute anyone expresses opposition to naval reduction or peace negotiations of any sort, the cry will go up, "Aha! on the armament makers' payroll!"

Which immediately will hush up that critic.

Bill Shearer must have been temporarily deranged to think he could afford to sue the armament makers; must have failed completely to realize how utterly it would discredit him, as an impartial naval authority.

The truth is, Bill twisted no actual facts. As they were, they suited his purposes.

He demonstrated that any possible Japanese-American friction must center around the Philippines, where Japan would be at a tremendous advantage; that England, sooner or later, invariably has fought her greatest trade rival, which certainly is the United States at present; that Europe generally seems mighty jealous of Uncle Sam.

An atlas, a world's history, a commerce department reported and the cable page of the handiest newspaper will prove Bill's case for him any day.

He did no romancing. He never needed to.

Maybe he did make mountains out of a few molehills. To distinguish between molehills and mountains, in the distance, is difficult. Bill's molehills, at least, were genuine.

DINNER
Baked Virginia Ham
Apple Rings
Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Small Endive and Sliced Egg
Salad

Hot Tea

This is a menu planned for two. It is simple enough to be easily prepared by the woman who works outside the home.

Today's Recipes
Cup Poached Eggs—Cup poached eggs are cooked in an egg poacher, eliminating the unpleasant wateriness of the old-fashioned method. Place small pieces of butter in each cup and add two teaspoons of milk. Break in eggs and salt and pepper lightly. Replace cover and steam until white solidifies. Serve at once on toast, or rusk, made by toasting thick slices of bread in the oven until brown and crisp all the way through.

Oatmeal Crisps—One and one-half cup dry oatmeal, one cup sugar, three tablespoons flour, one fourth teaspoon salt, one egg, one-half cup melted butter, one-half teaspoon almond extract. Mix dry ingredients and stir in the thoroughly beaten egg. Add melted butter and extract. Mixture should be fairly stiff. Drop from teaspoon on well oiled and floured pans about three inches apart, and bake in moderate oven until brown. Let cool slightly and remove from pan with pancake turner.

Peach Butter
(Mrs. Mary Worton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Two cups peach pulp, four cups sugar, one cup butter. Broken or soft peaches may be made into a selectable butter. Scald, peel, slice and measure the fruit. Place in a preserving kettle with the water and heat slowly. When peaches are softened, put through a fine sieve, return the pulp to the fire, add the sugar and cook until thick and clear. Pack in hot sterilized jars and seal.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Dizziness
Mrs. D.—Dizziness (vertigo, light headedness, faintness) may be due to a number of common causes, such as prolonged hot baths, bending suddenly, indigestion, constipation, too large enemas, certain drugs, strong emotions, or it may be due to a disease of the inner ear, hardening of the arteries, general weakness, especially a weak heart, and anemia.

If one suffers from continuous attacks, he certainly should have a physical check-up to find out the cause and have it remedied. The treatment for an occasional attack, if the face is pale—showing a lessening of the blood to the head—is to lie down with the head lower than the body or if this cannot be done, to sit with the head lowered between the knees. If the face is flushed, the patient should lie down with the head propped up to favor the return of the blood. Dashing cold water on the face will help.

A teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia may be taken.

Mrs. B.—Two of the cod liver oil tablets (put out by the reliable pharmaceutical firms, for physicians' prescriptions—and not advertised in the daily papers) are equivalent to one teaspoonful of cod liver oil. Some recent work would indicate that these had best be taken just after a meal containing some fat, as they are more potent then.

It is a wise plan for reducers who take no butter or cream to take a teaspoonful of cod liver oil (35 C.) or two of the cod liver oil tablets daily, to be sure of the vitamin A. (The liberal amounts of green vegetables allowed may supply sufficient, but it is best to be on the safe side, for vitamin A is very necessary to help resist disease.) Have you our instructions on reducing, Mrs. B? See column rules for obtaining them.

I am a woman of 52 and have falling womb, and my nerves are very poor. I have seen many doctors and they all tell me an operation is the only thing. But the chiropractor in our town tells me that he can cure me. Do you think he can? MRS. H.

The only relief that I know of for your trouble is an operation. Mrs. H. You will waste your valuable time and money when you try spinal manipulations to shorten those very stretched-out ligaments of the uterus, and to repair torn muscles of the floor of the pelvis which permit this prolapse. You should have yourself attended to, because the irritation of the prolapsed organ may ultimately result in cancer.

"Does a manual laborer need more vitamins and mineral elements in his diet than a sedentary worker?" In other words, as one's need for fuel food increases, does his need for vitamins and mineral elements also increase? V.

There probably would be some need for increased vitamins and mineral elements, but the greatest need, when the physical work is increased, is for energy and heating food—the starches, sugars and fats. Of course, some of the starches and sugars and fats should be secured from fruits and vegetables and cream, so the vitamins and mineral elements would be automatically increased. It is commonly believed by the layman that the protein (building or repair element) needs to be increased, but if it does it is only to a very small extent. We have an article on Balanced Diet which you may have.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What's fair in love? When two men love one maid or two maids love one man, what constitutes fair play?

The question is put up to me in the following letter:

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am coming to you with a great question. I am a girl 18 and my best friend is one year older. We are in love with the same boy. He is very good looking and has money. The biggest trouble is he lives close to my girl friend and she has the advantage."

"He tells me he thinks more of me when he is with me, and when he is with her he tells her the same. Please tell me what to do. I have tried to quit but it is impossible. He is on my mind day and night. I don't want to hurt my best friend. I hope this letter is not too long to be printed as I would like to know what others think."

AN interesting question, Blondie. Of course it is highly probable that the young man will settle the question himself pronto by meeting a third girl whom he declares he loves best. He's something of a flirt, I take it.

Each of you must consider that, much as you love the boy friend, your friendship for one another must not suffer. Few men would be worth that. Excuse me if I seem cynical. As a matter of fact, the greatest happiness of the two you love, is it not? If each of you keep that in mind and try to do nothing but what is perfectly fair and above board, there is no reason why you can't, when with him, be your own sweet selves, trying to win him with understanding and sympathy.

He will be choosing. Nothing you can do can change his relations to your personalities, and in case he DOES choose one of you, let the other be a good sport and be the first to congratulate them—yes, even if your heart is bleeding.

The following is the kind of letter that I like to run in the column, because it shows how kind people are to one another.

Do you remember the letter from the woman who has been in the sanitarium for three years? She is now at home but feels so miserable life hardly seems worth living, as she cannot go out with her husband and daughter and feels they are drifting from her.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am an interested reader of your column and when I read of this mother of one living daughter who is worrying over herself, my feelings certainly go out to her as I have been through the mill. I had the same feeling she has, thought everything I did was useless and every little ache or pain worried me to death. I was sick almost two years. I took a course of steam baths. Then I had some cheerful friend stay with me and we went places together, and, although it took time, I finally got my mind off myself and got well."

"If this lady cares to write to me, I will be glad to answer her letter. It's a terrible thing to be in that condition, but I'm sure she'll get over it because she certainly has lot to live for."

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a boy 19 years old. I met a girl that I dearly love and we had wonderful times together until she said: 'We've got to stop going with one another.' I asked her why. She said: 'You've been the sweetest, best boy I ever went with but we've got to stop.' That night she said goodbye."

"She passes my house nearly every day. Sometimes she speaks and at other times she does not. Do you think we will ever go back together? Why did she do this? She is nearly 17. I am thinking of leaving. Would you or would you not?"

I presume the girl just got tired and wanted a change of boy friends. Jilted. Those affairs usually leave one or the other with a sore heart. HIS FATHER'S SON
Like all the ladies, Mother Cricket liked to talk. As soon as she saw her little son was on the way to recovery, she began to tell how the accident happened.

"I was telling the children how their daddy made music with his wings when Fiddler declared he thought he could do it, too. Before I could stop him he raised his little wings just like his father does, and rubbed them together. Try, of course he got them caught. Try as I would, I could not pull them apart!"

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

TRUE GREATNESS—At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst of them. And said, Verily, I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. — Matthew 18:1, 2, 3.

GANGSTER YARNS

A young man arrested in a small village for an attempt to hold up a bank is reported to have said that his downfall came from reading detective stories. That may or may not be true. If it is, the excuse advanced by the accused does not in the least relieve him of responsibility. No matter how many, or what sort of detective yarns he may have perused, he still knew the difference between right and wrong, and understood perfectly well that bank robbery is a serious misdeed.

At the same time it unquestionably is true that many inexcusable stories dealing with the underworld and its inhabitants are being printed, even in presumably reputable magazines, and some are more undesirable than even the much advertised "sex stuff." These stories are not, however, detective stories in the older meaning of the term. They are gangster yarns and are almost as likely to make a hero out of some murderous thug as they are to paint him in his true, unlovely colors.

Such legends must inevitably do a great deal of harm when they are read by young people with inferior minds and morals and little background; and those who print them are taking upon their shoulders a great deal of serious responsibility for possible crime.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The story back of "Journey's End," one of the biggest Broadway hits in years, is much the same as that of other great stage successes. Several producers read the play and turned it down. At the end of this month 16 companies will be playing the show in seven languages.

When Phil Dunning wrote "Broadway" he hawked it around The Lane collecting a bunch of managerial raspberries. Al Woods sent the manuscript back with this message scrawled across the front page: "Not with my dough, Sweetheart."

Even Sir James Barrie, "Peter Pan's" papa, in the early days of his career, experienced the frustration of his initial play, "The Professor's Love Story," was unceremoniously turned down by the first manager who read it. Later, when Barrie had chalked his name on the Barn Door of Fame, the manager who had turned down his first play remarked: "How the devil did I know he was a genius?"

NO SHOW FOR TAXPAYERS Jimmy Walker and Major La Guardia, his opponent in the current mayoralty contest, came face to face, unexpectedly, at dinner the other night. They're both pretty quick on the "draw." Everybody crowded around to hear the fun. And this is what happened: They shook hands and each smiled a smile of moderate hilarity.

"Hello," said the Major.

"Hello," replied the Genial Jas.

When Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate, heard about it he remarked:

"That's a nice way to treat the taxpayers, isn't it?"

HOW "EVERYBODY" KNOWS

The apartment is leased to "Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Smith," but they're Mr. and Mrs. Smith in name only. He is one of the biggest brokers in town with a bridge playing wife and some daughters studying abroad. "Mrs. Smith" is the wife of a pompous little banker, with frog eyes, who thinks that when he stands in the east, the west tips up.

Both "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" are such prominent figures in town that they dare not court exposure by registering at a hotel for their afternoon-a-week rendezvous. Hotel detectives have been known to foment blackmail. Thus, the "exclusive" love nest in the "exclusive" neighborhood.

A couple of ex-Pollies Girls live directly opposite, sharing an "exclusive" love nest of their own. Their living room windows command an uninterrupted view of the living room of the "Smith" apartment across the way.

One of the visitors to the Glorified House of Mirth is a gentleman named Bionce. He has offices in Wall Street, with branches scattered from here to the coast. He was sitting in the House of Mirth when, chancing to glance across the street, he saw "Smith." "Damme!" ejaculated Bionce. "I ain't no old friend—" and he mentioned "Smith's" real name.

Ziegfeld's Graduate was inquisitive. Brother Bionce was loquacious.

THE WAY of the WORLD

LOAN VULTURE SHARKS

News comes that a small loan concern has been charging a woman interest of $2.20 every two weeks on a loan of $22. The arrest of the loan broker is ordered. There ought to be a crusade, kept up as long as necessary, in every city in the land to drive out of business every pirate of this stripe. There are reputable banks where men and women of good character, hard pressed for funds, can make loans at reasonable interest rates.

WHAT IS A THING WORTH?

What is a thing worth? There is no such thing as standard value. A thing may be worth much to you and little to the next fellow. Value is determined by desire. How badly do you want a thing? How nearly overpowering is your desire that will determine what you will say.

Gertrude Sanford, New York society girl, returns from an animal hunting expedition in the far corners of the earth, accompanied by representatives of the American Museum of Natural History. An Abyssinian chieftain gave her four baboons and three mountain monkeys for a bottle of brandy. Baboons and mountain monkeys, bought by any zoo, cost much money. Brandy bought from the nearest bootlegger, is not high. But the chieftain wanted brandy. His desire fixed the value.

Don't say wildly and thoughtlessly for things. Analyze your desire. Be sure how badly you want what you think you want. Value is a delicate instrument. Don't play fast and loose with it.

SCANDINAVIANS

One notes in the news that Theodore Christian is governor of Minnesota. Some years ago John Johnson was governor of the same state. Both of Scandinavian descent. Go into the northwest and note that the country is made desirable and prosperous by the contributions of the posterity of a great Scandinavian immigration. Norwegians, Swedes, Danes make sterling citizens. The United States will ever be in debt to Northern Europe.

VICTORY IN THE MIND

Victory in the mind is the main thing. Victory in behavior, victory in action, follow naturally. Make your decision and make it boldly, without reservations, honestly, even though it hurts. Once you have achieved victory in the mind, the worst is over.

Seized with the gambling mania, poor men who have nothing to lose play around the edges of big money. They lean over too far and then crash. To rush for help to meet their debts. There are many other crazes. Many wild desires, many uncontrolled impulses. Playing around the edges is not merely an exciting game. It is not even taking a chance. On the contrary it is the almost certain path to some big mistake that may cost everything.

Decide, in the mind, the course you mean to follow—and walk on.

EFFORTS TO RETAIN OLDER WORKMEN SAID TO BE PROGRESSING

By JAMES J. DAVIS

Secretary of Labor.

James J. Davis was born in Tredegar, South Wales, Oct. 27, 1873. He was educated in the public schools and later took a business course for several months. He holds honorary degrees from two American universities. He came to the United States with his parents in 1881 and began working as a puddler's assistant in an iron works at Sharon, Pa., and later in Pittsburgh. He moved to Wood, Ind., in 1893 and worked in steel and tin plate mills there. He was elected director general of the Loyal Order of Moose in 1906 and was appointed secretary of labor in 1921. He founded the Mooseheart Home and School at Mooseheart, Ill.

Considerable progress has been made of late to offset the false theory that youth, rather than the experience and age of seasoned workers, best serves the needs of production.

The department of labor has received reports from European countries describing the peculiar migration of workers from farm to city; and, to some extent, the same change has been taking place here. Consequently, city industries have been physically taxed to furnish employment for the augmenting farm labor, while in many agricultural sections, actual farm labor shortages have existed.

I cannot here even scratch the surface of description of what the labor saving machine has been doing in the constant displacement of men. But let us go back even half a century and visualize again the shoemaker, who, in those good old days, made shoes—every part of them, from toe to heel. The man who claims to be a shoemaker today, and who uses modern machine means of manufacture, makes only a part of a shoe. What was once a trade in itself is now a multiplicity of trades. Once there were shoemakers, but now we have virtually 20 specialized occupations, from which the shoe emerges, from toe to heel, and each artisan, with his machine, calls himself a shoemaker. The village blacksmith shop and the country tailor shop have given way to the steam hammer and the planing and slotting machine, and one week of hard labor has turned into one hour of the whirl of machine wheels.

THERE'S ONE THING THEY'RE UNITED ON ANYHOW

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

This series of articles on fashion in feminine beauty would not be complete without a word of warning about the danger of following any beauty fashion less wisely than well.

Perfect beauty is never standardized. The rare and lovely, and altogether satisfactory type of beautiful woman is always individual looking. Her beauty is the more interesting because no one can imitate it entirely. It is her own exclusive property. She adapts each style to suit herself. If fashion says straight hair is the vogue and hers looks more becoming waved, she wears it waved, but she chooses some style of hair-dressing that is in keeping with the fashion.

If Paris says "higher waistlines" and a higher waistline is definitely unbecoming to her figure, she keeps her waistline becomingly low, yet as high as she can wear it; or balances it with an Eton jacket effect, or some other high waistline illusion.

Cosmetics are quite as important as clothes to fashions in beauty. The correct and becoming make-up should be both fashionable and individual. If dark, gypsy powders and bright rouge are suited to a woman's coloring or costume, she will not affect them simply because they are the fashion. Golden or tawny powders and light tangerine or coral rouge will prove pleasant modifications of this style in complexions.

One unerring rule for making a success of your own individual type of beauty is to keep it in fashion in a way that pleases you. The colors and lines and modes that harmonize with your own fancy are most likely to flatter your appearance. And remember, beauty demands fitness to the surroundings and occasion. What passes for beauty in the city may not be so attractive in a rural setting. The best type of good looks, or beauty, is the type that is wholesome, healthy and individually adaptable to prevailing fashion.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—If William B. Shearer has been a press agent for armament-makers all these years, he has been a dandy.

A press agent's job is to get favorable publicity for his employers. Shearer got oodles of pro-armament publicity—whether he did it as a press agent or not. Assuming that certain armament makers had agreed to pay him for his services and then reneged, as he says they did, no wonder he was sore.

Bill did not overestimate, in considering his high art.

Professional navy men agreed in recognizing him as one of the world's foremost armament authorities.

His judgment has had more weight than the professionals'—partly because he has been free to express himself as he pleased, while they always are more or less muzzled by regulations; partly because, being an outsider, everyone has taken it for granted that he was disinterested—God save the mark, if he has been a press agent all the time.

Press agency like this is worthy of its hire.

It would seem also that modern methods of production have caused some employers to believe that youth, rather than the experience and age of seasoned workers, best serves the needs of production.

Consequently, at inopportune times, there have been discharged at middle age many veteran workers of ability, experience and settled habits, who thus face the necessity of an untoward adjustment at the age of 45 or 50 years.

Of late, some progress has been made in offsetting this false theory, and I shall continue to take every opportunity to emphasize the importance of retaining in employment those who have demonstrated through a long work period that they are entitled to the fullest employment considerations.

Unemployment is consequently ever present because of these and other causes which are constantly recurring; and it is to these problems that we must apply our very best thought if we would see no break in the tremendous progress of industry or in our great national soul of tolerance toward all.

Which immediately will hush up that critic.

Bill Shearer must have been temporarily deranged to think he could afford to sue the armament makers; must have failed completely to realize how utterly it would discredit him, as an impartial naval authority.

The truth is, Bill twisted no actual facts. As they were, they suited his purposes.

He demonstrated that any possible Japanese-American friction must center around the Philippines, where Japan would be at a tremendous advantage; that England, sooner or later, invariably has fought her greatest trade rival, which certainly is the United States at present; that Europe generally seems mighty jealous of Uncle Sam.

An atlas, a world's history, a commerce department reported and the cable page of the handiest newspaper will prove Bill's case for him any day.

He did no romancing. He never needed to.

Maybe he did make mountains out of a few molehills. To distinguish between molehills and mountains, in the distance, is difficult. Bill's molehills, at least, were genuine.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

MENU HINT
BREAKFAST
Orange Juice
Cup Poached Eggs
Toasted Rusk
Coffee

LUNCHEON
Garden Salad and Sandwich Plate
Sliced Peaches
Oatmeal Crispetts
Lemonade
DINNER
Baked Virginia Ham
Apple Rings
Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Small Endive and Sliced Egg
Salad
Gelatin Whip
Hot Tea

This is a menu planned for two. It is simple enough to be easily prepared by the woman who works outside the home.

Today's Recipes

Cup Poached Eggs—Cup poached eggs are cooked in an egg poacher, eliminating the unpleasant wateriness of the old-fashioned method. Place small pieces of butter in each cup and add two teaspoons of milk. Break in eggs and salt and pepper lightly. Replace cover and steam until white solidifies. Serve at once on toast, or rusk, made by toasting thick slices of bread in the oven until brown and crisp all the way through.

Oatmeal Crispetts—One and one-half cup dry oatmeal, one cup sugar, three tablespoons flour, one fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon baking powder, one egg, one-half cup melted butter, one-half teaspoon almond extract. Mix dry ingredients and stir in the thoroughly beaten egg. Add melted butter and extract. Mixture should be fairly stiff. Drop from teaspoon on well oiled and floured pans about three inches apart, and bake in moderate oven until brown. Let cool slightly and remove from pan with pancake turner.

Peach Butter
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Two quarts peach pulp, four cups sugar, one cup water. Broken or soft peaches may be made into a palatable butter. Scald, peel, stone, slice and measure the fruit. Place in a preserving kettle with the water and heat slowly. When peaches are softened, put through a fine sieve, return the pulp to the fire, add the sugar and cook until thick and clear. Pack in hot sterilized jars and seal.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Dizziness

Mrs. D.—Dizziness (vertigo, light headedness, faintness) may be due to a number of common causes, such as prolonged hot baths, bending suddenly, indigestion, constipation, too large enemas, certain drugs, strong emotions, or it may be due to a disease of the inner ear, hardening of the arteries, general weakness, especially a weak heart, and anemia.

If one suffers from continuous attacks, he certainly should have a physical check-up to find out the cause and have it remedied. The treatment for an occasional attack, if the face is pale—showing a lessening of the blood to the head—is to lie down with the head lower than the body or if this cannot be done, to sit with the head lowered between the knees. If the face is flushed, the patient should lie down with the head propped up to favor the return of the blood. Dashing cold water on the face will help.

A teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia may be taken.

Mrs. B.—Two of the cod liver oil tablets (put out by the reliable pharmaceutical firms, for physicians' prescriptions—and not advertised in the daily papers) are equivalent to one teaspoonful of cod liver oil. Some recent work would indicate that these had best be taken just after a meal containing some fat, as they are more potent then.

It is a wise plan for reducers who take no butter or cream to take a teaspoonful of cod liver oil (35 C.) or two of the cod liver oil tablets daily, to be sure of the vitamin A. (The liberal amounts of green vegetables allowed may supply sufficient, but it is best to be on the safe side, for vitamin A is very necessary to help resist disease.)

Have you our instructions on reducing, Mrs. B? See column rules for obtaining them.

"I am a woman of 52 and have falling womb, and my nerves are very poor. I have seen many doctors, and they all tell me an operation is the only thing. But the chiropractor in our town tells me that he can cure me. Do you think he can?" MRS. H.

The only relief that I know of for your trouble is an operation. Mrs. H. You will waste your valuable time and money when you try spinal manipulations to shorten those very stretched-out ligaments of the uterus, and to repair torn muscles of the floor of the pelvis which permit this prolapse. You should have yourself attended to, because the irritation of the prolapsed organ may ultimately result in cancer.

"Does a manual laborer need more vitamins and mineral elements in his diet than a sedentary worker?" In other words, as one's need for fuel food increases, does his need for vitamins and mineral elements also increase? V.

There probably would be some need for increased vitamins and mineral elements, but the greatest need, when the physical work is increased, is for energy and heating food—the starches, sugars and fats. Of course, some of the starches and sugars and fats should be secured from fruits and vegetables and cream, so the vitamins and mineral elements would be automatically increased. It is commonly believed by the layman that the protein (building or repair element) needs to be increased, but if it does it is only to a very small extent.

We have an article on Balanced Diet which you may have.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What's fair in love? When two men love one maid or two maids love one man, what constitutes fair play?

The question is put up to me in the following letter:

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am coming to you with a great question, I am a girl 18 and my best friend is one year older. We are in love with the same boy. He is very good looking and has money. The biggest trouble is he lives closer to my girl friend and she has the advantage."

"He tells me he thinks more of me when he is with me, and when he is with her he tells her the same. Please tell me what to do. I have tried to quit but it is impossible. He is on my mind day and night. I don't want to hurt my best friend. I hope this letter is not too long to be printed as I would like to know what others think."

BLONDIE.

An interesting question, Blondie. Of course it is highly probable that the young man will settle the question himself pronto by meeting a third girl whom he declares he loves best. He's something of a flirt, I take it.

Each of you must consider that, much as you love the boy friend, your friendship for one another must not suffer. Few men would be worth that. Excuse me if I seem cynical. As a matter of fact, what you really desire is the greatest happiness of the two you love, is it not? If each of you keep that in mind and try to do nothing but what is perfectly fair and above board, there is no reason why you can't, when with him, be your own sweet selves, trying to win him with understanding and sympathy.

He will do the choosing. Nothing you can do can alter his reactions to your personalities, and in case he DOES choose one of you, let the other be a good sport and be the first to congratulate them—yes, even if your heart is bleeding.

The following is the kind of letter that I like to run in the column, because it shows how kind people are to one another.

Do you remember the letter from the woman who had been in the sanitarium for three years? She is now at home but feels so miserable life hardly seems worth living, as she cannot go out with her husband and daughter and feels they are drifting from her.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am an interested reader of your column and when I read of this mother of one living daughter who is worrying over herself, my feelings certainly go out to her as I have been through the mill. I had the same feeling she has, thought everything I did was useless and every little ache or pain worried me to death. I was sick almost two years. I took a course of steam baths. Then I had some cheerful friend stay with me and we went places together, and, though it took time, I finally got my mind off myself and got well."

If this lady cares to write to me I'll be glad to answer her letter. It's a terrible thing to be in that condition, but I'm sure she'll get over it because she certainly has lot to live for.

MRS. T. This is one case where I will set aside my rule of no addresses exchanged, and if the woman who signed herself Worried Wife will send her name to me on a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I will send this lady's address so they can get in touch with one another.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a boy 19 years old. I met a girl that I dearly love and we had wonderful times together until July. She said: 'We've got to stop going with one another.' I asked her why. She said: 'You've been the sweetest, best boy I ever went with but we've got to stop.' That night she said goodbye."

"She passed my house nearly every day. Sometimes she speaks to me and at other times she does not. Do you think we will ever go back together? Why did she do this? She is nearly 17. I am thinking of leaving. Would you or would you not?" JILTED.

I presume the girl just got tired and wanted a change of boy friends. Jilted. Those affairs usually leave one or the other with a sore heart. Probably if you did not see her so often you would be able to get over the hurt of it and think less of her, so I am inclined to advise you to go, if you can.

NECK AND PET: You know the answers, girls, so why ask me? If you read this column at all you know I consider excess petting, such as you describe, as the sport of morons.

Peter's Adventures

HIS FATHER'S SON

Like all the ladies, Mother Cricket liked to talk. As soon as she saw her little son was on the way to recovery, she began to tell how the accident happened.

"I was telling the children how their daddy made music with his wings when Fiddler declared he thought he could do it, too. Before I could stop him he raised his little wings just like his father does, and rubbed them together, fast. Of course he got them caught. Try as I would, I could not pull them apart!"

"I hope this will teach Fiddler a lesson," chirped Mr. Cricket severely. "You had no business to be trying to do something you knew nothing about, child. I will instruct you how to play when it is time for you to learn. Your wings are not yet grown. That is why you got into trouble. Don't let me catch you trying any such thing again or I'll cuff you!"

"Don't scold silly Fiddler, daddy," pleaded Mrs. Cricket. "The child could stop him. He raised his little wings and flew off to his room."

"Only pals would travel as you and I have done, you bearing the burden of my weight upon your back. I can't fly, you know," he explained, in an aside, to the Crickets.

"No, but you can do so many other things that none of us fliers holds that against you!" declared Dawdler. "Besides, being a drone, I can't fly very well or far myself. And that reminds me, we haven't visited the flower garden behind Bee Villa yet. How about going there right now?" Dawdler asked Peter.

"Suits me," cried Peter, who for the life of him never could refuse an invitation.

Offensive might vs. defensive finesse.

The hard-hitting Hooven and Allison Co., champions of the American League, and the Downtown Country Club, pennant winners in the National League, are to fight it out in a series this week for the 1929 softball championship of the city.

The H. and A. is admittedly a team of sluggers while the Downtowners are probably superior defensively but, on paper, weaker at bat. Statistics reveal that the H. and A. has a team batting average of .367 for the season and the D. T. C. Country Club's batting mark is slightly above .290.

Even so, the contending teams are considered evenly matched and the title series will provide fans with a comparison of how the game is played in the American League as opposed to the type seen in the National League.

Bob Morton, Xenia, star halfback on the freshman squad at Ohio Wesleyan University last fall, reported for practice on the varsity squad last Friday and is conceded to be one of the most promising candidates for the "Batting Bishops" eleven this season with every chance of landing a regular backfield berth.

Morton graduated from Xenia Central High in June, 1928 and during his high school career starred at halfback on Buckeye football teams for three years and at forward on the basketball quintet. He was a particularly difficult player to stop in a broken field because of his shifty and elusive style of running.

Ohio Wesleyan this fall will meet two teams coached by recent team-mates. John "Red" Halliday, all-Buckeye halfback in 1928, was recently named backfield coach at the University of Cincinnati. Eddie Bickley, who starred at Wesleyan in 1924-25-26 and won varsity all-Buckeye and all-Ohio honors, has been named assistant coach at Heidelberg.

Following several unsuccessful efforts to open the track due to interference of authorities, Joe Adams, builder and owner of a dog racing track at Jeffersonville, Ind., announced the $80,000 plant is for sale. Since its erection several months ago it has had a stormy career. The announcement spoked a report that Adams had about decided to move the plant, including the grandstand and everything else, to another county where authorities might take a less hostile attitude.

All of which recalls to mind the question of what the Fairfield Amusement Park, Ltd. intends to do with its dog race track at Fairfield, which has been in darkness since it was closed by county authorities nearly two months ago.

Cases of about twenty-four ticket sellers and three of the principal stockholders, against whom gambling affidavits were filed, are still pending in court and no dates for the trials have been assigned.

It is reported that the partnership organization intends to have the gambling cases disposed of sometime this fall and then wait until next year before making another attempt to open the track with a spring meeting.

It is probably safe to say that the promoters will not abandon their efforts to reopen the track with a betting system in operation due to the large amount of money that has been invested in the plant.

Bowling Scores

Decisive victories marked the first week's matches in the City Bowling League.

The Downtown Country Club, Fuller and Sons and the Beckett Auto Co. each won three straight games and are in a three-way tie for leadership of the league.

Schedule for the week follows: Thursday at 7 p. m.—Beckett Auto Co. vs. Downtown Country Club; Friday at 7 p. m.—Hooven and Allison Co. vs. Fuller and Sons; Friday at 9 p. m.—American Legion vs. Flexmore Shoes.

League standing follows:
Team. Won. Lost. Pct.
D. T. C. Club 3 0 1.000
Fuller and Sons 3 0 1.000
Beckett Auto Co. 3 0 1.000
American Legion 0 3 0.000

HOLDS VISITORS TO FOUR SAFETIES AND RESERVES WIN 1-0

Vaubel Hurls Aply Also But Yields Seven Blows.

One run was all the Reserves could muster in the game with the South Park Shamrocks of Dayton Sunday afternoon at Washington Park—but that was enough and the local nine walked off the field with a victory by the smallest possible score, 1 to 0.

Charlie Maxton, on the mound for the Reserves, held the whip hand all the way. He limited the Shamrocks to four scattered hits, struck out eight batters and did not issue a pass.

Maxton, incidentally, had to be good. Although Maxton's cousin of the same name, who early in the season pitched for the Columbus Senators, played left field instead of pitching against the Reserves Sunday, Vaubel, Dayton moundsman, did a neat job of baffling local talent at the plate.

The only score of the game came in the third inning when Johnson, Reserve left fielder, led off with his second straight single, advanced to second while Conley was rounding out, and scored on a long triple to right center by Durnbaugh. On Tangeman's roller to the box Durnbaugh was trapped off third and finally run down.

Both pitchers were accorded air-tight support in the field, the Reserves playing errorless ball. Laschansky, Dayton first-sacker dropped two throws but the misplays were not costly.

The shutout victory boosted the total number of Reserve wins this season to eighteen against three defeats.

Maxton never pitched a better game and there were very few hard hit balls off his puzzling delivery. The four hits he yielded were all singles and no two came in the same inning. Only one Dayton batter reached as far as second base. The Shamrocks had the only possible chance to score in the second when Raiff led off with a single. He was sacrificed to second by Furnas, former Reserve third baseman, but was stranded on the middle cushion when Wassenich popped to Fenner and C. C. Maxton rolled to the box.

Maxton's greatest pitching feat was in the fourth and fifth rounds when he fanned five consecutive batters. He retired the side on strikeouts in the fourth and then whiffed the first two batsmen to face him in the fifth. Dayton hit few balls out of the infield, the Reserve outfield having only one put-out to its credit.

Even though the former Columbus pitcher did not preside on the mound for Dayton he turned in two comedy catches in left field. Johnson, Durnbaugh and Weller each collected two hits for the Reserves. Weller had a perfect day at the bat with two singles and a walk in three times up.

Next Sunday the Reserves will meet the Bowersville Bavliffs with Thurman Wical pitching for the Bavliffs.

CITY SOFTBALL TITLE SERIES STARTS TUESDAY AT COX FIELD

A three-game series between The Downtown Country Club, champions of the National League, and the Hooven and Allison Co., pennant winners in the American League, to decide the city softball championship this season, will start Tuesday night at 6 o'clock at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Plans for the championship series were announced Monday by the Softball Commission, which had delayed fixing a definite date for the opening game pending a ruling on a protest filed by the Post Office nine.

The game protested was the victory of the H. and A. over the mailmen last week and the protest was based on a fair hit which rolled out of the playing field and under parked automobiles adjacent to right field. The protest was disallowed, however, in the absence of ground rules.

The second game of the city series will be played Wednesday night and a third game, if necessary, will be staged Thursday night.

CENTRAL GRIDDERS GROOMED TO OPEN SEASON HERE NEXT FRIDAY

Coach Wilson Whips Light Material In Tentative Machine; Smittle And Bell Nucleus Of Prospective Eleven

Candidates for Xenia Central High School's football eleven will start their third and final week of preliminary training Monday in preparation for the season's opener with the O. S. and S. O. Home Friday afternoon at Cox Athletic Field.

Strenuous competition has boiled down the list of potential members of the team to a point where Coach "Pinky" Wilson must have a fairly good idea of the probable make-up of his first eleven.

Many old familiar faces, however, will be lacking from the lineup when the Buccaneers take the field against the Home eleven in Friday's practice contest.

The squad has escaped serious injury the only casualty of any consequence being Minor Monroe, promising tackle, who drew first blood, so to speak, in the matter of injuries. "Mike" pulled a muscle in the right shoulder in practice the first week and was not in uniform last week. He will also be out this week recuperating from the injury.

The battle for backfield positions on the Buccaneer eleven has narrowed down considerably. Birch

Farm Notes

MULCH INCREASES EARLY POTATO CROP

Straw mulch applied to potatoes after the plants were up at the Hamilton County, Ohio, experiment farm increased the yield 91 bushels per acre above the unmulched cultivated plots, according to John Bushnell, associate horticulturist in charge of potato investigations at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

The actual yield from the unmulched plots was 275 bushels per acre; from the plots mulched when planted, 323 bushels; and from the plots with the delayed mulch, 366 bushels. All the plots were planted in late March with certified Irish Cobbler seed and were harvested August 2.

A clean straw was used at the rate of ten to twelve tons per acre giving a mat four to six inches thick. This mat of straw was sufficient to keep down annual weeds; but such perennial weeds as thistle and morning glory came through it. The labor of applying and removing the straw was compensated by the saving in cultivation.

Straw mulch applied after the plants were up in 1928 increased the yield 23 per cent. Mulch applied immediately after planting was detrimental reducing the yield nearly one-tenth.

From these and other experiments, Dr. Bushnell concludes that if straw is available at a low value it can be profitably applied as a mulch for early potatoes in southern Ohio. But it should be put on after the potatoes are up rather than at the time of planting.

The early mulch, he finds, delays germination and nitritification by keeping the soil too cool.

The later mulch applied in early May after the soil is sufficiently warmed aids in retaining moisture and keeps the soil from becoming too warm during the hot weather of early summer when potatoes do best under cool moist conditions.

Purchase of the defunct plant of the White-Valentine Co. at Urbana was made Saturday by Ed Hunt, owner of the Hunt Broom Factory, Dayton Ave.

The plant had been in operation in Urbana for more than fifty years but was closed by the receiver Saturday and the machinery was sold to Mr. Hunt.

The Xenia broom factory plans to manufacture whisk brooms on a large scale by moving the machinery here from Urbana but definite plans, which may call for enlarging of the local plant by construction of a new addition, have not been worked out.

The tackle positions rest between Dan Donovan, Robert Kinsey and Leonard Bootes with John Juliam, John Hurley and John Cooper fighting it out for end positions.

The squad has not indulged in a practice game so far but has concentrated on formations, signals and scrimmages to some extent.

Athletic participation cards to be filled out by a physician and parents of football candidates were given to members of the squad this season. Players must prove they are physically fit before they are allowed to play.

XENIA OWNED PACER WINNER AT WESTON

The little pacing gelding, Homer McKinney, by Wallace McKinney, owned by Thomas Middleton and Son, of near Xenia, was raced at the Weston, W. Va., harness meeting recently in the 2:24 pace, capturing the event in straight heats. C. M. Turner drove the gelding to victory. The time was recorded in winning the second heat in 2:11 1/4. The time for the first heat was 2:13 1/4 and for the third heat, 2:12. The last half of each mile was paced in 1:04 1/4.

Maxton Beats Shamrocks In Pitching Duel

Next Sunday the Reserves will meet the Bowersville Bantams with Thurman Wical pitching for the Bantams.

Following several unsuccessful efforts to open the track due to interference of authorities, Joe Adams, builder and owner of a dog racing track at Jeffersonville, Ind., announced the $50,000 plant is for sale. Since its erection several months ago it has had a stormy career. The announcement spiced a report that Adams had about decided to move the plant, including the grandstand and everything else, to another county where authorities might take a less hostile attitude.

All of which recalls to mind the question of what the Fairfield Amusement Park, Ltd. intends to do with its dog race track at Fairfield, which has been in darkness since it was closed by county authorities nearly two months ago.

Cases of about twenty-four ticket sellers and three of the principal stockholders, against whom gambling affidavits were filed, are still pending in court and no date for their trials have been assigned.

CITY SOFTBALL TITLE SERIES STARTS TUESDAY AT COX FIELD

A three-game series between The Downtown Country Club, champions of the National League, and the Hooven and Allison Co., pennant winners in the American League, to decide the city softball championship this season, will start Tuesday night at 6 o'clock at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Plans for the championship series were announced Monday by the Softball Commission, which had delayed fixing a definite date for the opening game pending a ruling on a protest filed by the Post Office.

The game protested was the victory of the H. and A. over the mall-men last week and the protest was based on a fair hit which rolled out of the playing field and under parked automobiles adjacent to right field. The protest was disallowed, however in the absence of ground rules.

The second game of the city series will be played Wednesday night and a third game, if necessary will be staged Thursday night.

Candidates for Xenia Central High School's football eleven will start their third and final week of preliminary training Monday in preparation for the season's opener with the O. S. and S. O. Home Friday afternoon at Cox Athletic Field.

Strenuous competition has boiled down the list of potential members of the team to a point where Coach "Pinky" Wilson must have a fairly good idea of the probable makeup of his first eleven.

Many old familiar faces, however, will be lacking from the lineup when the Buccaneers take the field against the Home eleven in Friday's practice contest.

"Mike" pulled a muscle in the right shoulder in practice the first week and was not in uniform last week. He will also be out this week recuperating from the injury.

The battle for backfield positions on the Buccaneers eleven has narrowed down considerably. Birch Bell, junior flash, with two years experience as a regular, will probably be found at quarterback calling the signals. He will also alternate with Joe Smittle on the sending and receiving end of forward passes.

Smittle, the only other letter man available, will be shifted from center to fullback to strengthen the backfield. Joe is 175 pounds of heft and is the heaviest player on the squad. He will also do most of the punting but Coach Wilson has uncovered another promising kicker in Robert Kinsey, 165-pound junior who may play regularly at one tackle position.

Edgar Michael, 135-pound junior with two years of experience as a sub, and John Schleppl, 125-pound senior, with one year's experience, are looked upon favorably for the halfback jobs. Other backfield candidates showing ability are Kenneth Finlay, a senior weighing 125 pounds and Charles Adair, a 130-pound junior.

Lester Price, a junior, who tips the beam at 160 pounds is the outstanding choice for center with Paul McClellan, also a junior providing the most competition for the berth. Andrew Frazer, 165 pounds, sophomore, and Marvin Spahr, 150 pounds, junior, may play regularly at guards, but Harper Billmyer, 140-pound senior and Theodore Patton, also a senior of the same weight, cannot be overlooked.

The tackle positions rest between Dan Donovan, Robert Kinsey and Leonard Bootes with John Julliam, John Hurley and John Cooper fighting it out for end positions.

The squad has not indulged in a practice game so far but has concentrated on formations, signals and scrimmage to some extent.

Athletic participation cards to be filled out by a physician and parents of football candidates were given to members of the squad this season. Players must prove they are physically fit before they are allowed to play.

CHATTY—CODDESS OF CAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

READ THIS FIRST:

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, has one wealthy customer, Mrs. Van Nuyss, and through her Chatty gets a job as switchboard operator in the Van Nuyss bond house. There she meets and falls in love with David Jordan, handsome young bond salesman, and becomes jealous of his friendship with Agnes Herford, Mr. Van Nuyss' secretary.

Billie Langenau, who works in the office, comes to live in the flat across the hall from where Chatty lives. Chatty's brother, Pud, goes to high school and works evenings in Ben Tomlinson's drug store. Chatty learns that he delivers gin for Ben, and begs him to stop before he is arrested, but Pud refuses to do it.

One day Chatty sees David hand a note to Agnes Herford. Jealous, she goes through Agnes' desk to look for it. It is a simple message about some bonds, but in hunting for it Chatty finds Agnes' diary, filled with the story of her love for her employer. Chatty tears some of the pages out, and sends them to Mrs. Van, and Agnes is discharged. Dave Jordan, alone, knows that Chatty is responsible, and he drops her. Winnie Talcott, the office "vamp," gets Agnes' position. Winnie gets quite chummy with Chatty, and at a party Chatty meets Bryant Dunning, a new bond salesman. Winnie shows Chatty how to paint her face and "doll up." Bryant is married, but tells Chatty he has left his wife.

Agnes calls at Chatty's house and tells Chatty that Mr. Van had never suspected she was in love with him until the diary turned up. Agnes says she has seen Mr. Van at his office, and Chatty promises not to tell a soul.

Chatty decides to tell Mrs. Van about Agnes.

Mrs. Van tells Chatty's mother that she is going away for a while. Chatty guesses it is because of the note about Agnes she mailed a few days before.

A girl phones David at the office, and Chatty "listens in." He catches her.

Chatty, who has been on several parties with Bryant Dunning, goes over to his house this evening, after returning from a ride.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXX

They stopped for lemons and sugar at a store on the way back to town, and so it was after ten o'clock when they reached Bryant's apartment.

The little place looked even more cheerful and cozy to Chatty than it had the first time she visited it. There were some new magazines on the table in the middle of the room, and a big week end box of cigarettes stood beside them. Everything was as clean and bright as a new pin.

"You make the lemonade, Bryant," Chatty said, closing the door behind her. "I always make it too sweet. Is there such a thing as a looking glass around this place? I want to powder my nose."

"I'll show you where to go in just a minute," Bryant answered, nodding. "But first—"

He came up to her and put his arms around her. "First, kiss me, Chatty," he said, his voice low and shaken, as it always was when he began to make love to her.

They clung together for a long moment in the middle of the little room surrounded by the things that Bryant's wife had bought and put there. The flowered silk curtains and sofa cushions. The ivory silk shaded lamps. The empty birdcage and the pink tulips.

Chatty closed her eyes to shut out the sight of them.

She did not want to think of his wife now, while she was in the apartment. She wanted to forget everything, but just herself and Bryant, together, with the moonlight making silver squares of the shadows and the lamp light like a thin mist in the room.

"It's so lovely being here, isn't it?" she sighed, when he let her out of his arms. "Only I wish—your wife never had lived here with you. It spoils it all, somehow for us, doesn't it?"

"No," he said, in an odd gruff voice. "Let's forget her. And don't talk about her any more, for the love of Mike. That's the only way to do with people and with things that are gone—put them out of your mind."

Yes, that was the way to do, thought Chatty, pulling off her little close-fitting hat. And that was the thing to do with the thoughts that bothered her. The thought of Agnes and the diary that had lost her her job. The thought of Mrs. Van, starting off on a marital vacation because of that same little diary. The thought of Dave Jordan. Above all, the thought of Dave Jordan! "Where do I go to powder my nose?" she asked, and Bryant showed her a half-open door at the end of a little hall beyond the living room.

"Look at the time!"

Then he vanished behind a curtained doorway on his way to the kitchen.

The room that he had shown Chatty into was a bedroom. In it were two white, twin beds, a white dressing table and a white chiffonier. At the windows hung long, frilly curtains of blue so pale that they were almost white. The beds were covered with spreads of the same delicate color, and so was the armchair that stood beside the window.

Chatty stood looking around her with wide, troubled eyes.

Between the beds a small lamp with a bright yellow shade stood on a little table.

Above it on the wall was a shelf loaded with books.

The closet door stood open, and hanging from a hook just inside the door was a pink bungalow apron—no doubt left there by Bryant's wife when she went away from him and from this home of theirs.

The pink bungalow apron was too much for Chatty.

She switched off the lights and went out into the kitchen where Bryant was chopping ice.

The kitchen, too, seemed to be fairly alive with the presence of Bryant's vanished wife.

Here, too, at the window, hung little frilly white curtains, all daintily made by hand.

The tea towels, on a white rack above the sink, had been hemmed by hand, too. Beside the sink stood a tall, white stool—the kind that women sit on when they are peeling peas or peeling potatoes.

"Who keeps this place in such wonderful order?" Chatty asked, sitting down on the stool and feeling as if she had no right to be there.

"The landlady my wife used to have comes in once a week and fixes it all up. She was here yesterday," he answered, "and today, too. She does everything for me. Nice little place, isn't it?"

"Darling," Chatty answered, absently.

She got up from the stool and wandered back into the living room.

Among the flowered silk cushions of the couch lay something small and soft and white. Before she picked it up she knew what it was. A woman's handkerchief, perfumed delicately, and finished with a rolled hem that had been made by hand.

Chatty looked at the tiny neat stitches that were just as tiny and just as neat as the stitches in the curtains all over the house. "Your wife's been here lately, hasn't she?" she asked Bryant, when he came back into the room with a fat silver pitcher filled with lemonade.

He shook his blond head. "And then Chatty held out the handkerchief and showed it to him. He took it from her, his face reddening."

"Well, she was here," he admitted, and then he laughed in a ashamed sort of way. "Aren't you the little detective, though? How did you know that was my wife's handkerchief?"

He tucked it into his pocket and began to pour out the lemonade into two tall, yellow glass tumblers.

"Because it was hemmed by hand," Chatty explained, simply. "The curtains are, too, and the sofa cushions. And so few women go to the bother of making things by hand these days that I couldn't help noticing it. She made this place awfully attractive, didn't she? And how she must have hated to go away and leave it all!"

She ran one of her hands over the soft, fluffy silk cushions on the couch.

"Yes, she probably did hate leaving," Bryant said, sitting down beside her. "Darn jealous woman. Oh, let's forget her!"

"It's hard not to think of her here," Chatty told him, her big eyes widening, "in her own home. I'm not coming here any more, either. I feel as if I didn't have any right to be here—with you."

She got up from the couch and set her yellow glass back upon the tray.

"Let's go," she said.

"This wasn't what she had ever wished for, she thought, standing there in the little dream flat that had been made by another woman's clever, patient hands—it never had been part of her dream to live in love with a married man, living apart from his wife."

During the quiet lonely days, when she had sat sewing in Mrs. Mayberry's back room, she had thought of love coming to her as it should come to a girl. Of a man who would be in love with her as he had never been in love before with anyone else. Of marriage and a honeymoon and a home for two people to make and to live in together.

But not this—

Not this kind of forbidden love that had this flat and Winnie's flat and roadhouses for its background! Not this kind of love affair that was all mixed up with joy rides and wild parties, with cocktails and with kisses that belonged to another woman!

All at once Chatty saw just where she stood on the dangerous ground where a girl always stands when she begins to go around with a married man.

"I'm going!" she said aloud, and without waiting for Bryant to get his hat and follow her, she marched out of the little dream flat and down the stairs into the street.

The night air was as cool and refreshing as water upon the flushed face she raised to the moonlit darkness.

Bryant caught up with her just outside the house.

"Gosh, you act like a little goop tonight!" he said to her, exasperation in his voice. "Come on, get into the car!"

But Chatty shook her head. "No. Much as I care about you, I won't have anything to do with you any more," she told him firmly. "I won't even ride home with you. I'm going to walk."

"Why, you're crazy, Chatty!" He stared at her, bewildered. "What's changed you like this, all of a sudden? Are you sore about something? What have I done?"

She tried to tell him how she felt, as they walked along through the cool, murmurous summer night, followed by the lovers' moon that shone above the housetops.

"You see, you belong to another woman," she said. "Only I didn't realize it until I saw that handkerchief in your house tonight and knew that she'd been there to see you."

"Well, what if she had?" asked Bryant. "I can't help it if she comes bawling and boo-hooing around the place, can I? I told her this morning that I'm through with her and, believe me, Babe, I am! There's nobody for me any more but you—"

He tried to stop her in a dark part of the street and take her in his arms once more, but Chatty pushed him away.

Her mind was still full of the little flat, with its hand-made cushions and lamp shades, its white kitchen stool, its white twin beds with the bookshelf above them—all the things that separated him from her.

"I can't believe you've changed this way just because you've found out that my wife comes to see me sometimes," Bryant kept saying, as they walked along with the width of the sidewalk between them. "It must be something else."

Fussing and arguing with each other, they walked up and down Lipton Street a dozen times when they finally reached it.

Without getting anything really settled, they left each other at one o'clock, and Chatty went quietly up the stairs to the second floor of the apartment house.

MRS. HUDDLESTON ABANDONS CHANNEL

DOVER, Eng., Sept. 14.—Mrs. Myrtle Huddleston, American endurance swimmer, abandoned her attempt to swim the English channel today after coming within seven miles of her goal. Cape Gris-Nez, France. She went to bed here shortly after a tug brought her back to shore.

Mrs. Huddleston, a 31-year-old widow from Mattoon, Ill., was masaged by Mrs. Billy Kellingsley, wife of the man who trained Mrs. Huddleston for the swim and immediately afterward went to bed for a short sleep. She said she felt good.

Mrs. Huddleston made a wonderfully plucky attempt, said greensmith, her manager. "She would still be swimming if we on the tug had not insisted that she come out of the water."

CHATTY—GODDESS OF CAB
By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of: "HER MAN," "MONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDER," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.
COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

READ THIS FIRST: Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, has one wealthy customer, Mrs. Van Nuys, and through her Chatty gets a job as switchboard operator in the Van Nuys bond house. There she meets and falls in love with David Jordan, handsome young bond salesman, and becomes jealous of his friendship with Agnes Herford, Mr. Van Nuys' secretary.

Billie Langenau, who works in the office, comes to live in the flat across the hall from where Chatty lives. Chatty's brother, Pud, goes to high school and works evenings in Ben Tomlinson's drug store. Chatty learns that he delivers gin for Ben, and begs him to stop before he is arrested, but Pud refuses to do it.

One day Chatty sees David hand a note to Agnes Herford. Jealous, she goes through Agnes' desk to look for it. It is a simple message about some bonds, but in hunting for it Chatty finds Agnes' diary, filled with the story of her love for her employer. Chatty tears some of the pages out, and sends them to Mrs. Van, and Agnes is discharged.

Dave Jordan, alone, knows that Chatty is responsible, and he drops her. Winnie Talcott, the office "vamp," gets Agnes' position. Winnie gets quite chummy with Chatty, and at a party Chatty meets Bryant Dunning, a new bond salesman. Winnie shows Chatty how to paint her face and "doll up." Bryant is married, but tells Chatty he has left his wife.

Agnes calls at Chatty's house and tells Chatty that Mr. Van had never suspected she was in love with him until the diary turned up. Agnes says she has seen Mr. Van at his office, and Chatty promises not to tell a soul.

Chatty decides to tell Mrs. Van about Agnes.

Mrs. Van tells Chatty's mother that she is going away for a while. Chatty guesses it is because of the note about Agnes she mailed a few days before.

A girl phones David at the office, and Chatty "listens in." He catches her.

Chatty, who has been on several parties with Bryant Dunning, goes over to his house this evening, after returning from a ride.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXX They stopped for lemons and sugar at a store on the way back to town, and so it was after ten o'clock when they reached Bryant's apartment.

The little place looked even more cheerful and cozy to Chatty than it had the first time she visited it. There were some new magazines on the table in the middle of the room, and a big week end box of cigarettes stood beside them. Everything was as clean and bright as a new pin.

"You make the lemonade, Bryant," Chatty said, closing the door behind her. "I always make it too sweet. Is there such a thing as a looking glass around this place? I want to powder my nose."

"I'll show you where to go in just a minute," Bryant answered, noting "But first—"

He came up to her and put his arms around her. "First, kiss me, Chatty," he said, his voice low and shaken, as it always was when he began to make love to her.

They clung together for a long moment in the middle of the little room surrounded by the things that Bryant's wife had bought and put there. The flowered silk curtains and sofa cushions. The ivory silk shaded lamps. The empty bird cage and the pink tulips.

Chatty closed her eyes to shut out the sight of them.

She did not want to think of his wife now, while she was in the apartment. She wanted to forget everything, but just herself and Bryant together, with the moonlight, making silver squares of the shadows and the lamplight like a thin mist in the room.

"It's so lovely being here, isn't it?" she sighed, when he let her out of his arms. "Only I wish—your wife never had lived here with you. It spoils it all, somehow for us, doesn't it?"

"No," he said, in an odd gruff voice. "Let's forget her! And don't talk about her any more, for the love of Mike. That's the only way to do with people and with things that are gone—put them out of your mind."

Yes, that was the way to do, thought Chatty, pulling off her little close-fitting hat. And that was the thing to do with the thoughts that bothered her. The thought of Agnes and the diary that had lost her her job. The thought of Mrs. Van, starting off on a marital vacation because of that same little diary. The thought of Dave Jordan. Above all, the

"Look at the time!" thought of Dave Jordan! lemonade.

He shook his blond head. And then Chatty held out the handkerchief and showed it to him. He took it from her, his face reddening.

"Well, she was here," he admitted, and then he laughed in a ashamed sort of way. "Aren't you the little detective, though? How did you know that was my wife's handkerchief?" He tucked it into his pocket and began to pour out the lemonade into two tall, yellow glass tumblers.

"Because it was hemmed by hand," Chatty explained, simply. "The curtains are, too, and the sofa cushions. And so few women go to the bother of making things by hand these days that I couldn't help noticing it. She made this piece awfully attractive, didn't she? And how she must have hated to go away and leave it all!"

She ran one of her hands over the soft, puffy silk cushions on the couch.

"Yes, she probably did hate leaving," Bryant said, sitting down beside her. "Larn jealous woman. Oh, let's forget her!"

"It's hard not to think of her here," Chatty told him, her big eyes widening. "In her own home. I'm not coming here any more, either. I feel as if I didn't have any right to be here—with you."

She got up from the couch and set her yellow glass back upon the tray.

"Let's go," she said.

"This wasn't what I had ever wanted, was it, Chatty? Standing there in the little room that too had been made by another woman's clever, patient hands—it never had been part of her dream to tan in love with a married man, living apart from his wife."

During the quiet lonely days, when she had sat sewing in Mrs. Mayberry's back room, she had thought of love coming to her as it would come to a girl. Of a man who would be in love with her as he had never been in love before with anyone else. Of marriage and a honeymoon and a home for two people to make and to live in together.

But not this— Not this kind of forbidden love that was this fat and Winnie's flat and roadhouses for its background! Not this kind of love affair that was all mixed up with joy rides and wild parties, with cocktails and with kisses that belonged to another woman!

All at once Chatty saw just where she stood—on the dangerous ground where a girl always stands when she begins to go around with a married man.

"I'm going!" she said aloud, and without waiting for Bryant to get his hat and follow her, she marched out of the little dream flat and down the stairs into the street.

The night air was as cool and refreshing as the water upon the flushed face she raised to the moonlit darkness. Bryant caught up with her just outside the house. "Gosh, you act like a little goop tonight!" he said to her, exasperation in his voice. "Come on, get into the car!" But Chatty shook her head. "No. Much as I care about you, I won't have anything to do with you any more," she told him firmly. "I won't ride home with you. I'm going to walk."

"Why, you're crazy, Chatty!" He stared at her, bewildered. "What's changed you like this, all of a sudden? Are you sore about something? What have I done?"

She tried to tell him how she felt, as they walked along through the cool, murmurous summer night, followed by the lovers' moon that shone above the housetops.

"You see, you belong to another woman," she said. "Only I didn't realize it until I saw that handkerchief in your house tonight and knew that she'd been there to see you."

"Well, what if she had?" asked Bryant. "I can't help it if she comes having and boo-hoing around the place, can I? I told her this morning that I'm through with her and, believe me, Babe, I am! There's nobody for me any more but you—"

He tried to stop her in a dark part of the street and take her in his arms once more. But Chatty pushed him away.

Her mind was still full of the little flat with its hand-made cushions and lamp shades, its white kitchen stool, its white twin beds with the bookshelf above them—all the things that separated him from her.

"I can't believe you've changed this way just because you've found out that my wife comes to see me sometimes," Bryant kept saying, as they walked along with the width of the sidewalk between them. "It must be something else."

Fussing and arguing with each other, they walked up and down Lipton Street a dozen times when they finally reached it.

Without getting anything really settled, they left each other at one o'clock, and Chatty went quietly up the stairs to the second floor of the apartment house.

The front room was filled with light, and Pud and Mrs. Chatterton were sitting there, wrapped in their bathrobes, and looking very sleepy.

Pud got up when Chatty came in, and pointed accusingly at the old clock on the mantle shelf.

"Look at that clock!" he said to her. "One in the morning—and your mother worried to death about you! Staying out half the night without letting her know where you were! You're a fine kind of a daughter, aren't you?"

Chatty glared at him. "You're getting to be awfully pure since mother stopped your bootlegging career, aren't you?" she asked him, sarcastically.

Then she turned to her mother. "It won't happen again mother," she told her. "I should have phoned you to let you know I was staying out late. But I'm through with the crowd I've been going with, so I won't be keeping late hours any more. I've given up."

BRINGING UP FATHER

By GEORGE McMANUS

The Theater

Rudy Heath has gone back to Texas to stay and Hollywood, all except the police department, mourns her going although she never had anything to do with the film colony except to provide it with amusement.

The policemen, however, hope a Wellman is going to direct it in she doesn't change her mind because she was in scrapes with the police eight times, and after each scrape she lit out for Texas until everything blew over. She left Hollywood a month ago, forfeiting $1,500 bail for her failure to appear in Superior Court on forgery charges.

Then Rudy wrote her counsel from Houston, Texas: "I'm on my way home and I promise you I will stay there. I never intend to come back to Hollywood, it has been so mean to me. Tell it to the judge and assure him for me that I will never get in trouble again."

Miss Rudell Heath, a red-headed Texas girl of 21, first gained prominence in Hollywood January 1, 1925, when she celebrated the New Year by shooting five times at a soda clerk in a Hollywood Blvd. She missed. After she told the judge the soda clerk had "thrown her over", she was fined $1. A few months later she was arrested at 3 a. m. on a charge of assault to do great bodily harm.

When she explained that it was the movie director's annoying tone that caused her to hit him over the head with a milk bottle after her car had collided with his, the court was again lenient. The next time she was arrested she kicked through the glass of a door in a Japanese physician's home. Fleeing from Hollywood, she was arrested at Phoenix, Ariz., but Hollywood police urged them not to send her back. The last was for biting Barrett Rieder's arm and while she was in jail she was accused of forging three checks. She then went back to Texas for good.

Since she talks many of the old pictures, that were originally made silent, will probably be made over. One of these is "Victory", a powerful story by the late Joseph Conrad, which was made years ago under Maurice Tourneur's direction with Seena Owen as the girl, Jack Holt the man, Wallis Beery, the disgusting German and Lon Chaney in another role. ANNUAL REUNION OF VETERANS WILL BE HELD HERE ON THURSDAY

Plans are being made for the sixty-first annual reunion of the 110th O. V. I. Association to be held in the Assembly Hall and G. A. R. Rooms of the Court House, Thursday, September 19. Members of the 154th, 94th and 74th Regiments will be the guests of the association and will hold their reunion at the same time. All veterans of the Civil War and any persons who are interested are invited to attend.

The session will open at 9:30 when registration, payment of dues, securing badges, getting dinner tickets and getting acquainted will take place. The program for the morning opens at 10:30 and is as follows:

NON-STOP WINNER CONSIDERED BEST "BLIND" AVIATOR

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 14. — Henry J. Brown, night air mail flier on the Cleveland-New York stretch and winner of the non-stop race from Los Angeles to Cleveland in the national air races, is considered one of the best "blind" fliers in the country.

A "blind" flier is one who can feel his way through fog, storm and other bad weather, to his destination.

Brown attributes his uncanny ability to bring the mail through in the face of adverse weather to the knowledge of "instrument" flying, another term for "blind" flying.

"A pilot having confidence in his ability to fly by use of his instruments alone usually studies the weather maps that day and for days in advance, in order that he may have some idea of the probable weather ahead," Pilot Brown said.

"He must watch the ceiling, even though he flies far beneath it. If it does come down he needs low wisps of clouds. If he continues at the same altitude, the weather soon becomes an impenetrable fog."

"Pilot Brown then described the usual procedure of pulling up blind to a safe level, making a turn, lighting a cigarette, and after flying not more than 15 minutes in the "blind" the ceiling comes up to his safe level and the pilot pops out on the course."

"During his whole trip," Brown claimed, "he has remained within the range of his normal flying hazard. But had he not been an instrument flier, he probably would have been forced to use his 'chute' if he had decided to pull up blind, or else make an extremely hazardous turn, mostly blind, right over the ground and without the use of instruments."

GOTHAM HAS NEW PETS—TURTLES

Peggy Gay von der Goltz, above, and Abner, Vincent and Geraldine, below.

By VANCE GRIFFITH
Central Press Writer
NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Gotham's newest fad has four legs, a portable house and a disappearing head. Infant Graptemys Geographica, scientists call him, but to you and me he is a baby turtle.

Graptemys Geographica is imported from his home in the bayous that dot southern Mississippi and arrives in New York at the rate of 1000 a month. The species is distinguished by yellow streaks and irregular patterns on shells.

In the big city the baby turtles are placed on sale and find their way into all sorts of homes, chiefly those which contain children.

To Peggy Gay von der Goltz must go credit for introducing the turtles to a jaded metropolis.

Two years ago Peggy sold her first baby turtle. It had arrived by mistake or accident in a shipment of fish that came to the pet shop she conducts in Greenwich Village. Puzzled for a time in regard to just what to do with the unexpected little guest, she finally placed it on display. A customer on the lookout for a novel and unusual pet immediately bought it.

From this modest beginning the turtle purveying business has grown to enormous proportions. Peggy sells all the 1,000 a month that come from the southland. And each turtle receives a different name when it leaves the shop. This problem of selecting a different name is rapidly becoming more difficult.

Bangor, Me.—"Some time ago my right leg was in a terrible state where the veins had burst, causing varicose ulcers. Was told I would have to go to the hospital, but I couldn't do that so I tried many different remedies and prescribed treatments, but found no relief. I was very discouraged until I tried Resinol Ointment. I think it is the most wonderful preparation for varicose ulcers, and I wish everyone knew about it. An ulcer is a very stubborn thing to heal, but patience and Resinol Ointment will do the work." (Signed)—Mrs. NELLIE E. CURTIS.

NON-STOP WINNER CONSIDERED BEST "BLIND" AVIATOR

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 14. — Henry J. Brown, night air mail flier on the Cleveland-New York stretch and winner of the non-stop race from Los Angeles to Cleveland in the national air races, is considered one of the best "blind" fliers in the country.

A "blind" flier is one who can feel his way through fog, storm and other bad weather, to his destination.

Brown attributes his uncanny ability to bring the mail through in the face of adverse weather to the knowledge of "instrument" flying, another term for "blind" flying.

"A pilot having confidence in his ability to fly by use of his instruments alone usually studies the weather maps that day and for days in advance, in order that he may have some idea of the probable weather ahead," Pilot Brown said.

"He must watch the ceiling, even though he flies far beneath it. If it does come down he needs low wisps of clouds. If he continues at the same altitude, the weather soon becomes an impenetrable fog."

Pilot Brown then described the usual procedure of pulling up blind to a safe level, making a turn, lighting a cigarette, and after flying not more than 15 minutes in the "blind" the ceiling comes up to his safe level and the pilot pops out on the course.

"During his whole trip," Brown claimed, "he has remained within the range of his normal flying hazard. But had he not been an instrument flier, he probably would have been forced to use his 'chute' if he had decided to pull up blind, or else make an extremely hazardous turn, mostly blind, right over the ground and without the use of instruments."

GOTHAM HAS NEW PETS—TURTLES

Peggy Gay von der Goltz, above, and Abner, Vincent and Geraldine, below.

By VANCE GRIFFITH
Central Press Writer
NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Gotham's newest fad has four legs, a portable house and a disappearing head. Instant Graptemys Geographicus, scientists call him, but to you and me he is a baby turtle.

Graptemys Geographicus is imported from his home in the bayous that dot southern Mississippi and arrives in New York at the rate of 1000 a month. The species is distinguished by yellow streaks and irregular patterns on shells.

In the big city the baby turtles are placed on sale and find their way into all sorts of homes, chiefly those which contain children.

To Peggy Gay von der Goltz must go credit for introducing the turtles to a jaded metropolis.

Two years ago Peggy sold her first baby turtle. It had arrived by mistake or accident in a shipment of fish that came to the pet shop she conducts in Greenwich Village. Puzzled for a time in regard to just what to do with the unexpected little guest, she finally placed it on display. A customer on the lookout for a novel and unusual pet immediately bought it.

From this modest beginning the turtle purveying business has grown to enormous proportions. Peggy sells all the 1,000 a month that come from the southland. And each turtle receives a different name when it leaves the shop. This problem of selecting a different name is rapidly becoming more difficult.

The baby turtles are active and energetic and Peggy declares them excellent pets.

Children buy most of the turtles. Some of Peggy's small customers possess as many as fifty baby turtles and are constantly adding to this number. According to Peggy, many of New York's business and social leaders have become turtle owners.
